Truman Says Congress Will Enact Most Of Fair Deal

Will Agree With Him More Than Disagree, He Insists, Despite 'Troublemakers'

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday assailed "troublemakers" who attempt "to make it appear that there is bad feeling between the Eighty-first Congress and the President."

Without referring directly to recent Administration defeats on the Hill, Mr. Truman, in effect, turned the other cheek with a declaration that in the end he and the Congress "are going to agree on a lot more things than we disagree on."

Speaking to the United States Conference of Mayors at the Statler, the President said he differs with Congress on some points. But when the differences are important, he said, he will continue to fight for his own program. "Basically," he added, he and the Congress are working together "for the good of the country."

Attacks Real Estate Lobby

Mr. Truman renewed his campaign attacks on "the real estate lobby" and other "pressure groups" and he added that when the final score for this Congress is added up, "some of the selfish pressure groups are going to be pretty badly disappointed."

The real estate lobby he termed "the real enemy of the American home" because of its opposition to low-rent housing, slum clearance and rent control. The cost of living would have gone up another 10 to 20 per cent, he said, "if we had let them have their way."

The lobby, he added, wants to turn rent controls over to cities and States "not in order to straighten local authority but in order to destroy rent control."

A spokesman for the National Association of Real Estate Boards said "there is no comment now on the President's charges and there won't be any," the United Press reported.

Mayors Applaud Prediction

The mayors, most of them fellow Democrats, gave the President a good hand during and after his 27-minute speech. They applauded happily his prediction that Congress will pass "a good housing bill."

In his attack on "troublemakers," the President declared:

"It seems that whenever I make a recommendation to Congress, many newspapers and columnists set up a howl about the President trying to dictate to the Congress. And then if the Congress makes any decision that varies at all from my recommendations, these same troublemakers start a gleeful chorus about how the Congress has thrown the whole Democratic program overboard."

As the audience laughed and clapped, the President, with a grin, ad libbed:

"It's a wonderful country!"

Congress this year, he said, will

Gromyko on Way For U. N. Session, Red Radio Says

London (Tuesday), March 22 (AP). The Moscow Radio said today that Chief Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko has left Moscow for New York to attend the coming session of the United Nations General Assembly.

Gromyko, who has just been appointed chief deputy foreign minister, will head the Soviet delegation, the broadcast said. This apparently meant that Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky will not be present.

The broadcast said the delegation will include Yacob Malik, another deputy foreign minister and chief Soviet representative in the Security Council; Georgi N. Zarubin, Soviet ambassador to Britain; Alexander S. Panyushkin, ambassador to the United States; S. K. Tsarpkin, deputy representative in the Security Council.

'Hysterical' D. C. Background

'Just Writing a Book,' Asserts Miss Coplon to Spy Charges

By The Washington Post and Harris & Ewing
Candid camera shots at Judith Coplon's arraignment

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Judith Coplon's lawyer said here yesterday that the 27-year-old girl was gathering material for a novel at the time the Government claims she was spying for Russia.

It was to have been a novel with a Washington background, said Attorney Archibald Palmer, and would have been partly political, partly international, and "partly love."

"Where can you get more historical or hysterical background than in Washington?" the lawyer asked grinning.

Miss Coplon, a suspended analyst in the Department of Justice, sat alongside Palmer as he talked to reporters in the press room of the District Court.

Just before this, facing Judge Richmond B. Keech, she pleaded not guilty to an indictment charging her with taking intelligence reports from the Justice Department files. Her trial was set for April 25, and she was released in $10,000 bond—a sum her brother, Bert Coplon, sent down from New York in the form of a $7000 cashier's check on the Chase National Bank and $3000 in cash.

Miss Coplon goes on trial in New York April 1, along with Valentine Gubitchev, 32-year-old Russian engineer who was on the staff of the United Nations. They are charged there with conspiracy to commit espionage.

While Attorney Palmer was telling reporters that Miss Coplon was actually gathering material for a novel, one of them asked:

"Was she doing research when she met Gubitchev?"

"That's a good question," he replied. "I am glad you asked it. If you are a lady working here in Washington, and you go to all these teas and cocktail parties, you meet people from all over the world.

"Meeting a foreigner doesn't mean a thing. It's like a Frenchman kissing a lady's hand."

Miss Coplon smiled at that. She is noticeably small, standing five feet and weighing 100 pounds. She has dark eyes, a rather large mouth, good-looking teeth, and black hair. She was wearing a black beret, a black cardigan sweater, a gold necklace, gray

Peace Problem Is Chief One, Baruch Warns

Price, Tax Questions Hinge on Cold War, Mayors Are Told

Elder Statesman Bernard M. Baruch declared yesterday there is an urgent need for "peace with self-respect" and that "nothing can have meaning except as it is related to our peace strategy—a strategy we still lack."

Baruch followed President Truman to the speaker's rostrum at the United States Conference of Mayors at the Statler Hotel.

In direct words, forcefully read, Baruch declared "the overhanging threat of another war penetrates everywhere. Until we make up our minds what to do about this threat of war, it is impossible for mayors, governors or private individuals to know what to do."

Problems of taxes and high prices cannot be solved, he added, until there is some settlement of the cold war.

"Today the crux of our problem is that there is no peace," he said. "We must deal with this first." It is "futile to talk of free enterprise with a threat of war overhanging for free enterprise needs peace to function."

Baruch said "it is dreadful to contemplate that our difficulties should lie with a former associate who did so much to crush a common enemy. The mutual sufferings and losses have been almost forgotten in the determination of nations to have the peace cast in their own image."

Nonetheless, Baruch told the mayors, he believes "we can get

MIT Speech Is Cancelled By Truman

Said to Shun Meeting With Churchill While Bevin Is Visitor Here

President Truman yesterday canceled a speech he was to have made in Boston April 1, and it was reported the real reason was the approaching visit of British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin.

Mr. Truman was scheduled to speak at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology a day after a speech from the same platform by Winston Churchill. It was taken for granted that the two would meet and confer at M. I. T.

Foreign Minister Bevin is sailing on the Queen Mary Friday and is expected to arrive in Washington March 31.

President Truman is a strong admirer of Churchill. However, it was reported he felt that it would not be good protocol for him to be away hobnobbing with an Englishman out of office at the very time that the man now in charge of Britain's foreign affairs is in Washington.

Foreign Minister Bevin will sign the North Atlantic Treaty here, along with other foreign ministers, on April 4.

President Truman not only canceled his engagement to speak at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on April 1, but another engagement to receive an honorary degree at Boston College on April 26.

President Truman told reporters last week he expected Mr. Churchill to be his guest for luncheon or dinner in Washington sometime during his forthcoming visit.

Shopping Center Planned

Mrs. McLean's Estate Sold, To Be Made Into Small Homes

The Friendship estate, famous last home of the late Evalyn Walsh McLean, was sold yesterday to the Georgetown Development Corporation. The price was not disclosed.

The 2½-acre Georgetown estate, bounded by Wisconsin ave., R st., 34th st., and Reservoir rd. nw., will become the site of several single-family, 2 and 3-story brick homes, according to present plans.

The project will include a shopping center along the entire 320-foot Wisconsin ave. frontage. The main section of the 20-room mansion may be remodeled for residences, but the wings will be razed.

Mrs. McLean bought the property in 1942 after she sold the original 175-acre Friendship estate to the Government for development into the present McLean Gardens apartments.

She was reported to have paid about $150,000 for the new Friendship, and it was valued at $172,720 by her trustees after she died in 1947. The property was left to her son-in-law, former Senator Robert R. Reynolds, North Carolina Democrat.

The purchase was arranged through the John R. de Sibour Co., whose affiliate, the John R. de Sibour Co., Inc., will construct the homes and stores planned, according to Edwin Somers, sales manager for the company.

Tustees of the McLean estate are Thurman Arnold, former justice of the Court of Appeals; Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, Catholic University professor of philosophy, and the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University.

The construction is expected to start in about 90 days and should be fully completed by the fall of 1950, Somers said.

The Wisconsin ave. side of the property, where stores will be constructed, is already zoned for commercial use to a depth of slightly more than 100 feet, Somers said, and the stores will be restricted to that strip.

Architects for the project will be Howe & Foster, and Bernard Locraft will be engineer.

Reds 'Won't Retaliate' On Mark Ban

West's Currency To Be Unrestricted For People's Sake, Russians Declare

Berlin, March 21 (AP).—The Russians said tonight they would take no restrictive action against the Western ban on circulation of the Eastmark in western Berlin.

The acting Soviet commandant for Berlin said the Russians were refraining from countermeasures "to help the population of Berlin's western sectors."

Earlier today Russian-controlled German police tried to prevent western Berliners from going on a buying spree with surplus Eastmarks at ration-free stores in the Soviet sector.

Russian Statement

The western occupying powers issued their ban on the Soviet zone currency yesterday. They pointed out it had not been possible to reach agreement with the Russians on a single four-power currency for the blockaded city. Last June the Russians had made it a crime for anyone to possess Westmarks in their entire occupation zone.

Col. Alexis Yalizarov acting Russian commandant, gave the first official Soviet reaction to the western ban on the Eastmark:

"In an endeavor to help the population of Berlin's western sectors, the Soviet military administration does not intend to carry out any measures restricting the use of the mark of the German Bank of Emission (Eastmark) by residents of the western sectors in the Soviet sector of Berlin and in the Soviet occupation zone."

The acting Soviet commandant charged the Western move was an endeavor to "take measures to deepen the split of Berlin and to isolate completely the western part of the city."

Eastmark Value Tumbles

Russian-controlled newspapers launched a propaganda attack against the Western Allies' currency order. That order, they said, was a fraud against the population. Big headlines in the Communist press predicted mass bankruptcies in western Berlin. Western authorities described the Communist claims as "scare stories."

Western Berliners rushed to dump their remaining holdings of Eastmarks. Some tried to make purchases in Russian areas. Others lined up before exchange offices.

Gervasi to Report on Europe For The Washington Post

Frank Gervasi waves goodby as he boards Clipper in N. Y.

Frank Gervasi, foreign correspondent, magazine contributor and author, will report on the European situation for The Washington Post and associated newspapers under an assignment announced today. His signed articles will appear regularly in the Sunday editions of The Washington Post commencing with the issue of April 3.

His general European assignment takes him first to England, and thereafter he will fit his assignment to news developments abroad, traveling in all the European countries to which he can gain admittance.

Since the outbreak of World War II, Gervasi has been employed by Collier's Magazine. He has written more than 200 articles for Collier's on events in England, France, the Middle East and South Africa. Until 1939 he was a top-flight foreign correspondent, working for the Associated Press and Universal Service in London and in Rome. He covered the Italo-Ethiopian War and the Spanish Civil War, gaining distinction for interviews with Mussolini, Ciano and other Fascist figures in the '30s. His three books, "War Has Seven Faces," "But Soldiers Wondered Why," and "To Whom Palestine?" have had a wide popular sale.

Vice Squad Wars on Pyramids After Member Is Indicted; Phone Removal Threatened

Doesn't Think It Crime

Indicted Pyramid Clubber Says It Wasn't Worth It

"It isn't worth it," according to the man who said he started Pyramid Clubs in Washington.

When Daniel A. Thomas, 28, was indicted by a District Grand Jury yesterday because of his pyramid activities, it was the straw that broke the camel's back.

For the last three and a half weeks, the wounded war veteran who now works as a bricklayer, has been eating and sleeping pyramids.

It all started "when I heard Crosby and Hope talking about pyramid clubs," he said yesterday. "I didn't know what they meant, but a few days later I heard about them again from a friend in the West.

"Then I bought some Western newspapers to make sure I knew how they worked. I read that in California where they started, they tried to prosecute some guy, but the case was thrown out of court.

"I invited 14 other persons to the house one night, explained the deal, and showed them how they could win some good money. I didn't have to twist anyone's arm; they joined.

"Eight days later I collected 200 bucks plus. The next day my wife collected the same amount, and the day after that my sister-in-law got another 200 or so.

"And then the trouble started. All night long people would call me up to ask how the pyramids work. I couldn't concentrate on my job. And then Blick (Lieut. Roy E. Blick, head of the vice squad) questioned me, and now I'm indicted, I'm a crook.

"I just don't think I am. I don't think the pyramids are lotteries."

Thomas is a small man, slightly built with a prominent jaw. He and his wife have a six-month-old daughter.

Lieut. Blick to Let Plainclothes Men Join Clubs to Get Evidence on Them

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Armed with the first gambling indictment against a Pyramid Club member, the entire Metropolitan Police Vice Squad was called in yesterday for an around-the-clock crackdown against the widespread money-making scheme.

Vice squad chief Roy E. Blick said he would ask for reinforcements if necessary to bring charges of gambling against pyramiders.

Plainclothes officers will try to join the latest get-rich-quick fad under fictitious names to get evidence, he said.

The vice squad chief mentioned removal of pyramid club members' telephones as one likely possibility.

Bricklayer Indicted

Blick's crackdown was sparked by the grand jury indictment yesterday of Daniel A. Thomas, 28-year-old bricklayer of 61 Hawaii ave. ne., an admitted pyramid founder-member.

The grand jury called the clubs illegal lotteries and indicted Thomas on charges of violating the District gambling laws.

House Extends D. C. Rental Law as U. S. Bill Is Rushed

'Pretty Fair' Held Truman's Estimate of Southerners' Terms

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Administration forces pressed for speedy action last night on the Senate's States' rights rent control bill after a leadership conference at the White House.

Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) quoted President Truman as saying the Senate version of rent control is a "pretty fair bill."

Lucas said the measure reported out by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee calling for a 15-month extension with gradual decontrol at the end of 12 months is not all the President had asked for.

"But," added Lucas, "he is not too dissatisfied with it."

The majority leader expressed the hope the Senate could complete action today or Wednesday on the measure. He said he would schedule night sessions to speed passage if the Senate is "not making the progress I think it should" by Wednesday.

The present law expires on March 31. Because of the differences between the House and Senate bills, joint conferences will be necessary before final action

Swift Senate Accord Seen on Local Measure Passed by 247 to 117

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A bill extending District rent control from March 31 through June 30, 1950, was approved by a 247-117 roll call vote of the House yesterday.

The action sent the bill to the Senate where a District subcommittee is slated to pass on it at 9:30 a. m. today and the full District committee will consider the measure in a meeting at 10 a. m.

Subcommittee Chairman J. Allen Frear (D., Del.) said, "So far as I am concerned I want to recommend subcommittee approval of rent control as it passed the House."

Besides calling for the 15-month extension of District rent control, the House-approved bill makes two main changes in the present law:

1. Controls would be reapplied to housing accomodations that result from conversions costing less than $1500. Converted housing was taken out of control last year; the bill would leave controls off conversions that cost more than $1500.

2. A new limitation would go into the law for cooperative apartment sales. After March 1, 1949, 65 per cent of tenants in occupancy in a building would have to be members of a cooperative before it could take over the building and oust other tenants. If the 65 per cent quota were not filled, tenants would be protected from eviction for the life of the act in a building sold on the cooperative plan. For buildings turned cooperative before March 1, the rights of apartment buyers to oust tenants through court action would be preserved.

Cogswell Approves

District Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell said he thought the House bill would be satisfactory, but added the March 1 date in the co-op clause might "hurt a few people". He said it might have been better to make the date a little earlier.

A half-hour of debate preceded House passage of the rent bill. District committee leaders teamed up in a bipartisan call for passage.

2 More Dairies To Cut Milk Prices Today

Safeway Unit Lowers Store Cost 2 Cents; Richfield Down 1 Cent

Two more dairies—a chain store supplier and a wholesaler—have announced they will reduce milk prices today. Two others had previously announced cuts effective yesterday and April 1, respectively.

The Lucerne Milk Co., a division of Safeway Stores, will sell Grade A homogenized milk through its stores today at 17 cents a quart, a spokesman announced. The previous price was 19 cents for purchases up to 3 quarts and 18 for 4 quarts or more.

Yesterday's other announcement was by the Richfield Dairy. An official said the price of its milk products would be reduced by 1 cent a quart today. Richfield sells to restaurants, hotels and institutions.

Embassy Cut in Effect

The first cut in an expected general reduction here was made by Embassy Dairy yesterday as it delivered regular milk for 20 cents a quart, one cent below previous prices, and "plain" homogenized milk for 18 cents, two cents less than before. The plain type has slightly less butterfat, it was explained.

Thompson's will reduce its prices by one cent a quart on April 1, the firm announced Sunday.

All price cuts announced apply to the District and nearby Maryland, but not Virginia.

Officials of other dairies studied the situation yesterday and most are expected to announce similar cuts by April 1, for the District and Maryland at least.

Virginia Hearing Set

Any price reductions in Virginia will have to await action by the Virginia State Milk Commission, which sets both the price paid to producers and the retail price for that area. The commission has set a public hearing on proposed reductions for the Arlington-Alexandria area at 2 p. m., March 29, at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria.

The Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, which controls some 80 per cent of the milk sold in metropolitan Washington, is reported ready to accept a 50-cent reduction in the $6.06 (plus premium) price per hundredweight now paid producers, if the Virginia commission approves.

Maryland U. Budget Details Disclosed by Byrd to Assembly

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., March 21.—Details of the University of Maryland's budget were outlined tonight to members of the General Assembly by President H. C. Byrd.

Speaking forcefully and obviously smarting from recent criticism of the university's "lump sum" budget policy, Dr. Byrd told a joint session of the House Ways and Means and Senate Finance Committees that:

1. A pending bill which would require that detailed budgetary information be submitted legislators, "does not now have sufficient objection to warrant the university making a fight against it."

2. The university has no objection to demands for information of any kind being written into the law.

3. If such laws are enacted, however, legislators should "be careful to see that the law will not be interpreted as going further than it is intended to go—that under it the university will not be subject to restrictions that will prevent it from doing a satisfactory job."

In justifying budget procedure over the past 12 years, Dr. Byrd emphasized that complete details of the university's working budget have been furnished the State budget director, the State board of public works and the Governor.

"Before we can spend one penny of the lump sum appropriations, they are broken down into a complete detailed budget and approved by the board of public works," he said.

"The university's operation budget has been prepared in greater and more intelligent detail and conveys more detailed information than the budgets of any other department of the State or any institution in the State to which the State appropriates money," he added.

During his two-hour talk before committee members, Dr. Byrd referred frequently to giant charts which he said represented the university's working budget.

In response to a question, Dr.

Thoroughgoing Burglars Rifle 9-Story Building

New York, March 21 (U.P.).—A squad of thorough burglars ransacked an entire nine-story office building yesterday, left a trail of broken windows, doors and furniture, and made off with thousands of dollars in cash, jewelry and goods, police disclosed today.

Police could not estimate exactly the total loss and said they seldom had seen such a complete job of wreckage.

The burglars ransacked 54 offices in the building at Broadway and 52d st. They left untouched only a number of small shops on the ground floor, apparently because they feared they might be discovered on the street level.

FSA Reshuffling In New Unit Asked

Priest Says U.S. Child Aid Splits Homes

By The Associated Press

A member of Congress and a Catholic clergyman, both from Nebraska, told a House committee yesterday that Federal aid for dependent children makes for divorces and broken homes.

"We hear well-founded complaints about mothers who call up the officers of local agencies to ask how much they could get if they divorced their husbands," said the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John O'Grady, of Omaha, secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities.

Representative Curtis (R., Neb.), a committee member, put in: "In other words, the family institution would be dissolved for so many pieces of silver."

Msgr. O'Grady testified at a hearing before the House Ways and Means Committee on President Truman's proposed social security program. He said:

"The church has expended millions of dollars in developing facilities for child care. Government has nothing to gain and everything to lose by discontinuing the use of these facilities and developing purely governmental programs.

"Such programs would cost the taxpayer several times the amount that is expended in the care of children at the present time, and would offer no guarantee that the children would receive comparable care."

Old-Age Benefits Urged For Farmers, Hired Men

By the United Press

A group of agriculture leaders said yesterday it is high time farmers share in the old-age benefits of the social security program.

A plea that Congress broaden the Federal program to include both farm owners and farm workers was made by 24 members of the agriculture committee of the National Planning Association.

They pointed out that farmers were left out of the social security system when it was adopted originally in 1935, mainly because of the administrative difficulties of including them in a program financed by payroll taxes.

"These technical problems have now been worked out," the committee said, "and there seems to be no objection from any major group to placing farm people under the old-age security umbrella."

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A Government department of Cabinet rank, to take over most of the present Federal Security Agency, was proposed yesterday by the Hoover Government Reorganization Commission.

The new department would include education and welfare functions of FSA. But other FSA activities, such as the Public Health Service and several dealing with employment, would be transferred elsewhere. Under the recommendations the new department would have fewer agencies than the present FSA.

The only addition Hoover recommends is the Bureau of Indian Affairs, now a part of the Interior Department. Taken out of the present FSA setup would be:

1. Public Health Service, which would go to the United Medical Administration—a new Government office which the Hoover group proposes in a separate and simultaneous report.

2. The Bureau of Employes Compensation; the Employes Compensation Appeals Board and the Bureau of Employment Security, to the Labor Department.

3. The Food and Drug Administration, part to the Agriculture Department and part to the new United Medical Administration.

Number of Dissents

The report, marked by a flood of dissents by various members, suggested an arrangement for the new department, following the structure of FSA, but added it was "no hard and fast rule. The Secretary should determine the organization and be free to amend it."

Units the proposed department would include are, beside the usual office of counsel, staff services, budget and accounting, personnel, supply, management research, information and publications and liaison with Congress:

1. Social Security services, including the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance; Bureau of Public Assistance (grants-in-aid to States of old-age assistance, dependent children and the blind) and the Children's Bureau.

2. Educational services, including Bureau of Education; Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation; American Printing House for the Blind; Howard University, etc.

3. Indian Affairs.

The report proposed an undersecretary and three assistant secretaries, appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. All lower officials would be named by the secretary.

Other Recommendations

Other recommendations included:

1. That as soon as the new department "develops a more unified approach to grants-in-aid, the Children's Bureau be divested of those functions, and the bureau shifted to a general staff capacity.

2. That a review of the old-age and survivors' insurance program be made. That review should (1) cover the benefit formula, (2) the coverage of the system, (3) the scope of protection afforded, and (4) contributions and financial policy.

3. That a study be made to determine whether the several Government retirement systems, to which employes contribute, should, with the exception of the Foreign Service system, be merged. These would include the Civil Service, Alaska Railroad, Canal Zone, Tennessee Valley Authority, District of Columbia teachers, and civilian teachers at the Naval Academy.

This recommendation is promised wide opposition. Benefits granted in all these systems differ, the report points out, the Civil Service being "generally the most liberal with the exception of the Foreign Service system."

James Forrestal, commission member, made a brief but strong dissent here. "This recommendation, as written, could be construed to indorse a standardization of the benefits of the merged systems," he wrote. "I do not believe that this is possible or wise."

4. That the Railroad Retirement Board retain its present status.

5. That various educational programs, now in other agencies, be left to those "agencies whose functions the particular programs serve to promote." These include:

Education of veterans, institutional on-farm training, vocational and physical rehabilitation, and service schools, providing education in nonmilitary subjects within the armed forces, and activities related to elementary and secondary education, and those related to higher education.

The Bureau of Indian Affairs was given the longest treatment by the commission. The difficulties in guiding Indian affairs, it said, "have been emphasized by recent crises," and added:

"For example, the Navajo Nation, comprising some 55,000 Indians in New Mexico, Arizona and Utah, is in severe financial straits that have caused widespread malnutrition and starvation. This has occurred when the United States as a whole is enjoying prosperity and virtually full employment.

"Many other Indian groups, among the estimated 400,000 in the United States, face similarly severe conditions."

The "keystone" of Government Indian policy, it said, should be "progressive measures to integrate the Indians into the rest of the population as the best solution of 'the Indian problem.'"

Pending "achievement of the goal of complete integration, the administration of social programs for the Indians should be progressively transferred to State governments."

Objectives of joint Federal-State planning should include:

(1) Adequate education for the entire Indian population, (2) adequate living standard, (3) reduction of mortality and morbidity rates, (4) ultimate transfer of responsibility for medical services to local governments, (5) transfer of tribal property to Indian-owned corporations, (6) participation by Indians in political and civic life of the states and (7) ending tax exemptions for Indian lands.

In addition, it said "young employable Indians and the better cultured families should be encouraged to leave the reservations."

Montgomery Teachers Plan Variety Show

Montgomery County schoolteachers have agreed to pool their dramatic talents again this year to further the education of deserving students.

To provide funds for their project, a group of the teachers will appear next week in two performances of Spotlight Review, a variety show with an all-faculty cast. Sponsored by the Montgomery County Teachers' Association, the show will be presented next Monday night at the Leland Junior High School in Bethesda, with a second performance slated for April 2 at the Richard Montgomery High School in Rockville.

All proceeds from the ticket sales will be placed in a scholarship fund to provide college education for worthy high school graduates. Recipients of the scholarships will be selected by the teachers themselves from students to be graduated this year from county high schools.

The project provided scholarships for three Montgomery County graduates when it was begun last year.

This year's production will be directed by Miss Gertrude Kantz of the Kensington Junior High School. Among principal characters will be Mrs. Grace Howes, principal of the Montrose School; E. Guy Jewell, vice principal of Richard Montgomery High School, and Charles Hamm, a teacher at Leland Junior High School.

Controls Likely On Maryland Wheat in 1950

By The Associated Press

The Production and Marketing Administration said yesterday that Maryland wheat farmers soon may come under an acreage allotment program.

Joseph H. Blanford, chairman of the PMA for the State, announced from College Park, Md., that supplies of wheat are fast reaching a volume that will require the Secretary of Agriculture to announce restrictions on the 1950 crop.

Production of tobacco also may be forced under controls in the next year or two, he added, noting that the January 1, 1949, carryover of Maryland leaf was estimated at 47 million pounds as compared with 45 million pounds a year earlier.

Dental Forms Drove Dentist to End Life

Derby, England, March 21 (AP). The coroner returned a suicide verdict today in the morphine death of a dentist who left a note saying "all these dental forms are driving me insane."

Ill health and the extra work resulting from Britain's new national health act were given as causes for the suicide of 63-year-old Dental Surgeon Leonard Renwick.

Can of Beans Held Aid In Student's Death

New York, March 21 (U.P.).—Police said today that a can of beans indirectly caused the death of a 21-year-old New York University student.

They said Irwin Billett, a former sailor, apparently put an unopened can of beans in a pot of water to boil and fell asleep. The overheated can exploded, smashed the burner and caused gas to escape.

One U. S. Medical Agency Proposed

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

The Hoover Commission yesterday asked Congress to unite the major Federal medical services under one new agency, completely divorced from any new Cabinet-rank department.

In so doing, the commission reversed its own task force's original recommendation that the consolidation be handled as a division within a new National Bureau of Health which would have embraced health, education and security.

A supplemental report of the task force, released simultaneously with the commission's recommendations, revealed that task force members were "requestioned" and had agreed to the single agency set-up.

Veterans Oppose Plan

Actually, the Hoover Commission split sharply on the medical plan, which powerful veterans' organizations have already condemned as one which would strip the armed forces and Veterans Administration of their continent-wide networks of hospital facilities. The commission report mustered unqualified support from only five members of the 12-man Government reform group.

The report recommended establishment of a United Medical Administration, consolidating the Government's major services in the field of medical care, public health and medical research.

As proposed, it would unite:

1. All Veterans Administration hospitals and out-patient facilities, with VA retaining the paper work of certifying eligibility, determining disability degree ratings and similar processing details.

2. All general hospitals and virtually all station hospitals and dispensaries of the armed forces within the United States, except that each of the three services retain one major teaching and research center (such as the Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, Md., and Walter Reed General Hospital here).

3. The United States Public Health Service, its hospitals, functions, facilities and personnel, all of which now operate under the Federal Security Agency.

4. St. Elizabeths Hospital here, unless Congress should decide to turn the Federal mental health institution over to the District of Columbia. The hospital now functions under FSA direction.

5. The four nonmilitary hospitals in the Canal Zone.

Facilities Excepted

Federal medical care facilities which would not be incorporated in the proposed new agency would include:

1. The excepted one United States research and training center retained by each of the three services, Army, Air Force and Navy, plus those post and station hospitals and dispensaries within United States but too remotely located for integration in the UMA hospitalization program, and all military medical facilities outside this country.

2. Hospitals of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

3. Hospitals of the Bureau of Prisons.

4. The U. S. Soldiers Home, in this city, and the U. S. Naval Home, in Philadelphia.

5. Other small hospital functions, such as those incident to operations of the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Atomic Energy Commission.

Would Aid Others

The commission, however, requested that the UMA professional services be used to help the Indian and prison hospitals in procuring their staffs.

The proposed United Medical Administration, designed to eliminate "overlap, waste and inefficiency," would be manned by "career personnel drawn initially from the various agencies" and "supplemented by medical officers" detailed to it for training and rotation. It would be headed by an "outstanding administrator" who would report directly to the President.

The Administration, under the proposed plan, would be assisted by an advisory board consisting of the Surgeons General of the Army and Navy, the Air Surgeon, and the Administrator of Veterans Affairs or his representative. This board would recommend UMA policies.

Commission Chairman Herbert Hoover and Commissioner Carter Manasco dissented from this recommendation, contending that the board should be more than an advisory one, and should be empowered "to determine the policies of the UMA."

"We sincerely believe that unless the board is given such powers . . . the program will weaken if not destroy military medicine," said Hoover and Manasco in their written dissent.

Dean Acheson, vice chairman of the commission, and Commissioners George D. Aiken and James H. Rowe, jr., registered their united dissent to the proposed agency, and held out for its incorporation in a Cabinet-level Department of Welfare.

Should Congress disagree with their minority view, they said, the Public Health Service, at least, should be placed in the Department of Welfare, "even though the Government's hospital activities are consolidated in a separate agency."

"Instances of the interrelationships among health, education and security can be multiplied many times over," they wrote. "These functions all tie together. Hospital activities should be integrated with them. But if they are not, the other health functions should remain where they are."

Taxes Top Problem As Mayors Convene

The mayors and other top officials of most of the Nation's cities yesterday opened a three-day conference here and most of them agreed their big problem is taxes.

At an afternoon session of the United States Conference of Mayors at the Statler Hotel, they cheered when Mayor Martin H. Kennelly of Chicago defined their problem as how to get "a more equitable distribution of the tax dollar taken out of the coal communities."

The silver-haired Chicagoan suggested that Federal and State governments reduce their spending "so we can spend more where the people live."

The municipal officials cheered again when President Truman told them that Secretary of the Treasury Snyder soon will call a conference to try to untangle tax laws of cities, States and the Federal Government.

Yesterday was principally a day of listening to speeches. Today there will be more, including one by Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) on the Atlantic Pact and a symposium on atomic energy. Resolutions will be debated Wednesday.

General Dwight D. Eisenhower dropped in for five minutes during a luncheon to declare:

"I realize that local officials sometimes are tempted to pass things unnecessarily to the Federal Government because they thereby escape the necessity of levying locally unpopular taxes which may be hard to explain to the voters."

But, he added, "to the extent to which we pass on our responsibilities we surrender our authority." He declared the Nation "cannot exist" unless State and local governments do their jobs for local self-government is basic to democracy.

The resolutions committee, headed by Mayor William E. Kemp of Kansas City, will consider wire tapping, rent control, housing and other matters.

A resolution was introduced yesterday by Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro, jr., of Baltimore, calling for a congressional investigation of wire tapping. Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York, whose administration is involved in a wire-tapping case, was present at the morning sessions but did not speak.

The Baltimore Mayor also offered a resolution asking extension and strengthening of rent controls.

During the afternoon the municipal officials listened to mayors of five cities tell about their own tax problems and how they have been met.

Mayor David L. Lawrence of Pittsburgh declared it is time for State and Federal Governments to agree on "a Marshall Plan for the great cities of this country."

Such a plan, he said, should include aid to help eliminate slums and rebuild "our central city areas."

Mayor Charles P. Farnsley of Louisville described his city's occupation tax of 1 per cent, levied on incomes earned within the city.

"By this means," he said, a large number of people living outside the city limits but who worked within the city" are made to pay their share of costs of city conveniences which they use.

The Mayor of Birmingham, W. Cooper Green, described his city's business license tax which brings in about 16 per cent of the city's revenue. The tax is levied on such things as merchandise inventories, amount of equipment and number of employes a business may have.

Partial Text of President's Address

Partial text of President Truman's address to the U. S. Conference of Mayors follows:

The more closely people are brought together—the most they rub elbows—the more necessary it is for them to regulate their affairs on a democratic basis. In meeting this need through local self-government, our cities are among our most important democratic institutions.

As usual, there is an exception to the rule, and the exception in this case is the city you are meeting in today, the City of Washington, D. C. I hope that the Congress will soon give the District real self-government and make it, like our other cities, a local democracy.

* * * *

IN FOREIGN countries, as well as in the United States, cities show their essentially democratic nature. I am glad to see that the conference of mayors maintains strong bonds of friendship with cities in other nations. Out of the understanding which you are creating among the cities of the world will come added strength for the cause of peace.

I extend my greetings to your honored guests who are here from other countries. The mayors from Canada are such old friends that we almost forget that they come from another country. To the mayors who are here from Europe, we people of the United States of America express our admiration.

They and their cities have given us a wonderful example of the vitality of democracy. In many parts of Europe the cities have been invaded, fought over, and in many cases reduced to rubble. But the spirit of democracy has survived in the ruins. And the cities have been born again.

* * * *

Here at home our citizens face less terrible problems. But if America is to fulfill its promises, our cities must be healthful, beautiful, and pleasant places in which to live and to work. We have been making real progress toward achieving those standards. But much remains to be done.

One of the biggest problems facing us today is that of housing.

It has been obvious ever since the end of the war that we have needed bold and large-scale action on housing. I have repeatedly recommended such action. In particular, we have needed a fresh start in the construction of rental housing for low-income groups, in the clearance of slums, and in research to reduce building costs.

* * * *

THE cities have long favored such a program. In fact nearly everybody has favored it except the real estate lobby, which has managed to delay it year after year. Every year of delay has increased the need for the program and the size of the job we must do.

I believe that the end of this long and unnecessary struggle is in sight, and that this year will see the enactment of satisfactory housing legislation.

In fact, I believe that this year will see the enactment of a great deal of legislation for the good of the people.

Incidentally, I have been much interested in the attempts of the usual troublemakers to make it appear that there is bad feeling between the Eighty-first Congress and the President of the United States. It seems that whenever I make a recommendation to the Congress, many newspapers and columnists set up a howl about the President trying to dictate to the Congress. And then if the Congress makes any decision that varies at all from my recommendations, these same troublemakers start a gleeful chorus about how the Congress has thrown the whole democratic program overboard.

Of course, I differ with the actions of the Congress on some points, and where these differences are important I shall continue to urge the course I think is right. But basically the Congress and the President are working together and will continue to work together for the good of the country. We are going to agree on a lot more things than we disagree on. And when the final score for the Congress is added up, some of the selfish pressure groups are going to be pretty badly disappointed.

As I have already indicated, one of the things we can expect this Congress to do is to pass a good housing bill.

We cannot discuss the housing shortage without mentioning rent control. I know that you will agree with me on the necessity of maintaining rent control in those areas where there are still serious shortages and few vacancies.

* * * *

During recent weeks the real estate lobby has made a concerted effort to have rent control turned over to the cities and localities. I have no doubt that the elected officials of city and local governments in most large city areas are as strongly in favor of effective rent control as I am. They know that their problems of overcrowding, relief to the needy, crime and juvenile delinquency, would be greatly increased if rent controls were removed now. The point is, however, that most cities have neither the legal authority nor the financial resources to carry out a successful program of rent control. The real estate lobby knows this perfectly well. It wants us to turn rent control over to local authority—not in order to strengthen local authority, but in order to destroy rent control.

Another very serious matter facing our cities is the fundamental problem of finances.

* * * *

MANY cities are paying now—in crime, in disease, and in blighted areas—for the haphazard way their land has been developed. Whole areas now need to be cleared out and put to good uses; utilities need to be improved and rearranged; schools and public buildings need to be rebuilt; and future expansion must be properly guided in the interest of the whole community. You all know how necessary, and yet how slow and expensive, this job is. Many cities today have inadequate financial resources to achieve the large-scale improvements that are required.

Here is a problem at the very core of American life. A solution is required not only in the interest of the cities, but also in the interest of the State and Federal Governments.

One of the most important first steps is to bring some order out of the tangle among cities, States and the Federal Government in the field of taxation and financial relations. This question has, I know, been high on your agenda for many years. In the near future, the Secretary of the Treasury is inviting representatives of State and local officials to meet with him and other Federal officials in a preliminary conference to work toward a program for action in this field.

Back in 1928 when I was an executive officer in the biggest county in Missouri I wrote an essay on tax distribution between the Federal, State and local governments. I reread it the other day and it's just as good now as it was then.

* * * *

The financial health of the cities, however, is more than a matter of tax policy. Cities can be financially sound only if the general economic health of the Nation is sound.

* * * *

IN THIS connection, I hope that you are all familiar with the proposals I have recently made to achieve economic stability. I hope that you will acquaint yourselves with the facts of the case, and not just the propaganda. I am sure that you will find that those proposals are not more radical than the concept of preventive medicine. In the old days, we used to concentrate on curing the sick. But now, as you mayors know, we rely increasingly on public health and sanitation measures to prevent disease. In the same way, we are moving from the idea of curing depressions after they happen to the concept of preventing them. That is what my proposals are intended to do.

Byrd Reveals Budget Details

Byrd admitted that in the past the Legislature has not been given detailed budget information.

"But from now on I'm going to see to it that they get so much information they will know as much about the university as I do," he declared.

The total university request for funds this year amounts to $13,705,651.

During the hearing, which was requested by the university head, Dr. Byrd stated in answer to a question that he would be "delighted" to furnish each member of the Legislature a copy of the working budget.

But, he emphasized, salaries paid professors should not be made public because it would "create dissatisfaction, break down morale and better enable other institutions to wean away our good men."

State Budget Director James G. Rennie also testified.

"I don't think the University of Maryland budget could be prepared in any more detail," he said. Asked if he thought the present university budget practices required any additional legislation, he replied in the negative.

"I have always felt we had full information on which to base our recommendations to the governor," he said.

Agitation over the university's budget procedure first arose about three months ago with publication in the Baltimore Sunpapers of a series of articles.

The articles pointed out that the university was the lone State institution which did not submit detailed budgets for consideration by the Legislature.

Until today, the Legislature had received only the following information on the $13,705,651 budget request approved by Governor Lane:

1. Three pages of lump-sum appropriation proposals contained in the State budget requests submitted by Governor Lane.

2. The working budget for the current year, based on appropriations made in 1947.

3. Proposed university budget increases for the coming year from general funds—but not from special or Federal funds.

4. Details, from the State budget director, of special and Federal funds receipts anticipated by the university for the coming fiscal year but no indication of how the receipts are to be spent.

A bill requiring submission of detailed budgets from the university was introduced in the Legislature following appearance of the articles.

After bitter debate, the House of Delegates defeated the measure by a 58-55 vote but a move was made to reconsider it. The second attempt carried but it fell one short of the required constitutional majority of 62.

Peace Problem Is Discussed

the peace we crave if we pace and control ourselves in the interest of all and not of selfish groups."

"I would not get panicky about the future," he went on. "We need have no fears of the present or future, if we keep ourselves strong militarily, economically and spiritually."

But if war comes, he added, "we will be ready to do our duty."

Baruch told the municipal officials that in meeting this year in Washington "you have come to the right place" for "here the decisions must be made which will free you to solve your problems."

Until these decisions involving war and peace are made, he added, "all of us" are "prisoners of the Federal Government."

"This condition exists," he said, "because we live in a world of alarums."

In discussing the Nation's economy, Baruch took a middle position between those who predict another "bust" and those who say "nothing is to be feared." Planning is useless, he said, "until some port is fixed as our destination . . ."

He blamed "some of our postwar troubles" on tax reductions and what he termed "the general scuttle-and-run policy." Tax reductions, he said, have weakened the Government's financial position and aggravated the inflation.

"Whether taxes should now be lowered or raised hinges on what is decided upon in the peacemaking," Baruch went on. "That holds for all aspects of our problems—for prices, Government controls, the size of our military establishment and other matters. Nothing can have meaning except as it is related to our peace strategy—a strategy we still lack."

Baruch said there has been "too much emphasis" on the need for increased power whereas the country needs "stable purchasing power."

"Increased wages, higher pensions, more unemployment insurance—all are of no avail if the purchasing power of money falls faster," he told the mayors.

New tax sources, he said with a smile, "are as rare as sources of uranium."

Baruch advised the mayors to postpone whatever expenditures they can, to hold back "some of your strength" until the "over-all decisions are made."

These decisions, he said, included how much of America's resources are to go into the "cold war," will the Nation continue to undertake new commitments, what must be given up at home if foreign aid and armaments are to be increased and "must we continue to bear so many of the burdens of the world or are other nations to assume a greater share."

Stettinius To Take Rest

Former Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius has been ordered by his private physician to take a complete rest for several weeks, Mrs. Stettinius said last night in Charlottesville, Va., following rumors that he had suffered a heart attack.

Stettinius resigned last Wednesday as rector of the University of Virginia and also from the university's board of visitors.

He is resting, Mrs. Stettinius said, at their home at Charlottesville on the order of his physician, Dr. H. B. Mulholland. Dr. Mulholland ordered the rest, she said, after the former Secretary showed symptoms of overwork and exhaustion.

Truman Hopes D. C. Will Have Self-Rule Soon

Pesident Truman declared yesterday he hopes Congress "will soon give the District real self-government and make it, like our other cities, a local democracy."

Mr. Truman's statement came in his address to the United States Conference of Mayors at the Statler Hotel.

Describing American cities as "among our most important democratic institutions," the President added that "as usual, there is an exception to the rule, and the exception in this case is the city you are meeting in today, the City of Washington, D. C." Then he expressed his hope for congressional approval of a home rule measure. The President has been a consistent supporter of District home rule.

D. C. Unrepresented

Although some 220 mayors and nearly 400 other municipal officials are attending the conference, there was no official representative present yesterday from the City of Washington.

The District Commissioners—Washington's "mayors" — have "never been interested" in attending the annual gathering, according to Paul V. Betters, executive director of the conference. He added that, therefore, they had not been asked this year to attend nor had they asked to come.

From District Commissioners John Russell Young and Guy Mason yesterday came statements that they did not attend because they were not invited.

Commissioner Young said that in all his years in office, he did not believe such an invitation had ever been tendered the District Commissioners. "I think they consider us as governors of a State, rather than as mayors," he said.

Commissioner Mason said he did not believe in attending functions to which he was not invited, although he thought the program of the conference, as outlined in newspapers, seemed "very interesting."

Senators to Confer

Today the Senate District Committee will discuss a recently-revised Washington home rule and reorganization bill in executive session.

Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.), chairman of the Senate District home rule subcommittee, said last night that he planned to introduce the measure after the meeting, probably Wednesday.

He has scheduled brief public hearings March 28 on the revised bill.

The bill as drafted by the Kefauver group calls for an appointed city manager and a nine-member elected city council with authority to enact local legislation. It also provides for an elected Board of Education.

Although details of the measure have been witheld pending its introduction in the Senate, Kefauver has announced that the reorganization and regrouping of District agencies follows the general pattern of the Auchincloss bill.

Truman Hits At Needlers

enact "a great deal of legislation for the good of the people."

The President concluded with a plea that the city officials acquaint themselves with the "facts" of his economic stabilization program and "not just read the propaganda."

He said the mayors would discover his economic proposals, which so far have had little success in Congress, "are no more radical than the concept of preventive medicine." In fact, he added, what the program attempts to do is to prevent depressions before they occur rather than cure them after they happen.

Before leaving the White House to make the noonday address, Mr. Truman had his usual Monday morning conference with Democratic leaders in Congress. As he left the meeting, House Speaker Rayburn said talk that the Administration program is "bogging down is nonsense." Senator Lucas, the Democratic floor leader in the Senate, agreed.

Mr. Truman's speech drew fire from the Senate Republican leader, Senator Wherry of Nebraska. He told reporters:

"If the President wants to find the troublemakers, let him look at the record. It shows that just seven members of the Senate voted to let a majority limit debate as he suggsted. The troublemakers must be among the 80 who voted against his idea."

As to the real estate lobby charges, Senator Wherry declared "this is just another Administration boogieman."

Senator George (D., Ga.) said he hopes the President is right that "basically" he and the Congress can get along together. He added "that would be fine."

Bloody Bill Case Returned

A bloodstained $20 bill yesterday caused the United States Court of Appeals to send back a robbery case to District Court to receive testimony of a District policeman.

The case involved the conviction of Frank Coats, 51, of 1127 7th st. se., who had been sentenced in District Court to serve 6 to 18 months in jail for robbery of Livingston Hill, 4925 Lee st. ne., at a crap game.

In the trial, Hill testified that after he was robbed, he returned to the game with a policeman and found in the pot a $20 bill with blood on it and said both the bill and blood were his.

After the conviction, Defense Attorney Octave Bigoness told the court that he had gone three times to a police station to get evidence, but that no record of the incident could be found, nor could he determine the name of the officer.

Finally, on the fourth try, he said, he learned the identity of the policeman as Wade G. Baucom, who, he said, agreed to testify there was no $20 bill on the table.

On a new-trial motion, the officer's testimony was refused.

In writing the opinion for the Appeals Court, Judge E. Barrett Prettyman said:

"It was an odd event that the prosecutor rested his case upon the testimony of one witness and did not produce the officer who saw so much of the affair.

Soviet Warns Finns On West Alliance

Miscow, March 21 (U.P.).—Finland was warned today against aligning itself with the western powers, and reminded that it became independent only after the Bolshevik revolution.

An article in the newspaper Pravda of Leningrad, the organ of the Leningrad Soviet, said:

1. Finland is violating its peace treaty with Russia.

2. Finnish people realize that the further consolidation of their state sovereignty, acquired from the hands of Lenin and Stalin as the result of the October (1917) revolution is possible only by carrying out a democratic line inside the country and, externally, by a policy of sincere friendship with the Soviet Union."

3. The attitude of the Finnish government of Premier Karl A. Fagerholm toward Russia is deliberately becoming worse.

4. The anti-popular activity of Finnish reactionaries is inspired by overseas reaction. Finland is within the orbit of the keen attention of Anglo-American imperialists, who are hoping to draw this country into a contemplated anti-Soviet military bloc, and trying to convert northern Europe, including Finland, into a springboard for the new world war they are preparing."

(Point two in the Leningrad Pravda article was a reminder that Finland, like Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, was a part of Czarist Russia. After the Bolshevik revolution on November 7, 1917, Finland declared its independence. The Bolsheviks issued a declaration on January 4, 1919, that this step conformed with their policy.

Pravda said that Finland had violated Articles VIII, XIII and XV of the Russo-Finnish peace treaty.

First, it was complained, Finland released from prison former Premiers Edwin Linkomies and Jukho W. Rangell and former Finance Minister Vaino A. Tanner, sentenced as war criminals for collaborating with Germany in World War II.

Secondly, Pravda said, Finland was tolerating secret rearming and military training.

"Continual acquittals or unusually mild sentences for the organizers of secret arms depots is an obvious violation of peace treaty obligations," Pravda said.

Pravda said also that Finland's economic condition was steadily deteriorating because of the policies of the Fagerholm government, though Russia had done everything it could to help that country by offering all kinds of economic advantages, including a reduction of reparations payments.

Pravda added that Premier Fagerholm understood how shaky his position was, and was trying to strengthen it by enlarging the basis of his government. But, Pravda said, he was trying to do the widening without the participation of the "democratic union," which is the Communist bloc.

Senate Committee Approves Nichols

ALL SMILES—The Senate Interior Committee yesterday approved the nomination of Dr. John R. Nichols, president of New Mexico A. & M. College, to be commissioner of Indian Affairs. The nomination now goes to the Senate. Dr. Nichols would succeed William A. Brophy, who resigned about a year ago because of ill health. After the hearing, Dr. Nichols said: "If the nomination is confirmed, I will come to Washington as soon as I can get moved."

Moscow Hails Hoxha, Tito's Albanian Foe

London, March 21 (AP).—Premier Enver Hoxha of Albania, bitter enemy of Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia, arrived in Moscow today with an impressive delegation, including the deputy chief of the Albanian general staff, Moscow Radio said tonight.

Russia's new foreign minister, Andrei Y. Vishinsky, and Deputy Premier A. T. Mikoyan were among those who greeted the visitors at the airport, the broadcast said.

There was a guard of honor, and the airdrome was decorated by the flags of the two countries, it was reported.

Hoxha's arrival followed reports that the Communist Bureau of Information, the Cominform, soon might intensify its pressure on Marshal Tito, whom it ostracized for alleged deviation from the party line.

Albania had been a virtual satellite of Yugoslavia, dependent on it for many things, when the Cominform denounced Tito. Hoxha at once supported the Cominform, and relations between the two countries have become progressively bitter since.

Plea to Delay Pact Rejected By President

A request to postpone the signing of the proposed North Atlantic Treaty to permit 60 days of public debate has been flatly opposed by President Truman.

In a letter to Senator Watkins (R., Utah), who suggested the delay, the President said he does not agree such a postponement is necessary.

There will "undoubtedly be ample opportunity" for thorough consideration of the pact between its signing—expected on April 4—and action by the Senate, the President said, expressing hope that the treaty will be approved "as expeditiously as is consistent with full consideration."

Letter Read to Senate

Watkins read the President's letter to the Senate. It was in answer to a telegram Watkins sent to the President on March 7 at Key West, seeking a 60-day interval between public release of the pact—which was made on Friday—and its signing.

Watkins protested that most members of the Senate had not been informed of the pact's provisions, but key details were "leaked" to "favored reporters" to stir public favor for it.

Watkins yesterday reiterated his plea for a 60-day postponement "as a period for study and analysis of the pact before we make a formal commitment by signing the treaty."

He asked, "What possible harm can come from allowing the full period of 60 days?"

Collaboration Noted

The mutual defense alliance, certain to be signed by at least eight nations—and possibly 12—requires ratification by two-thirds of the Senate before it commits the United States. It will regard the security of each nation as the security of all, with armed force to be used, as individually determined necessary, to resist aggression.

President Truman stated in his letter that an "unusual step" had already been taken in maintaining "close collaboration" between the State Department and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee during the treaty negotiations.

"Ordinarily," he said, "treaties are negotiated by the State Department and discussed with the Foreign Relations Committee only after they have been signed and submitted to the Senate for its advice and consent to ratification."

Watkins Poses Questions

In discussing the treaty, the President said:

"It is my belief that if we can make it sufficiently clear, in advance, that any armed attack affecting our national security would be met with overwhelming force, the armed attack might never occur."

In his Senate speech, Watkins asked, are we "committing ourselves to a ground war in Europe?" The treaty provision regarding an attack on one nation as an attack on all, he said, "right now . . . sounds like double talk to me," and asked if it would bind the pact members to aid an attacked member.

He also asked, "Would a Communist government be welcomed as a member of the pact?; how far it will be extended; "what new pacts in Asia are contemplated;" what it will cost the United States in military aid, and is it "the only way left to preserve our security and the security of our friends overseas?"

Lisbon Cabinet Meets On Atlantic Treaty

Lisbon, March 21 (AP).—The Portuguese cabinet discussed the North Atlantic Treaty at a long meeting today. There was no announcement after the meeting whether Portugal had reached a decision on taking part in the pact.

Britain Declares 3-Month Ban on Political Parades

London, March 21 (NYHT).—Following yesterday's pitched battle between Fascists and anti-Fascists in North London, J. Chuter Ede, Home Secretary, today ordered a three-month ban on all city processions "of a political character," the limit allowed by law.

Ede made it clear that he blamed yesterday's disorders principally on the Communists who bitterly protested, sometimes with force, the parade of Sir Oswald Mosley's Union group through the North London streets.

The Mosleyites, according to Ede, were comparatively well-behaved yesterday. He said the principal disturbance was created by their opponents. He added that 19 arrests were made and 10 policemen were injured, though not seriously.

French Voting Gives Queuille First Round

Paris, March 21 (U.P.).—Premier Henri Queuille led his coalition government parties to victory in the first round of Sunday's provincial elections, despite impressive displays of popular strength by both Communists and Gaullists, official returns showed tonight.

The nation is voting to fill 1508 seats in departmental councils, which are roughly equivalent to State Legislatures in the United States. Seven hundred and twenty-three seats were decided yesterday.

The team of Radical Socialists, Socialists, Popular Republicans and the Republican Party of Liberty, which governs France, won a grand total of 327 seats. Their combined popular vote froze out Communists and Gaullists. Their collective victory assures continuation in office of Queuille's middle-of-the-road regime.

But the Communists, who placed one candidate in every canton (county), rolled up the biggest popular vote in the country, although they took a bare 17 council seats. Their candidates ran second in most of the cantons.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Rightist Rally of the French people won 170 seats, more than any other single party, and was second in the popular vote to the Communists.

Another 785 seats will be balloted on in run-off elections next Sunday. Although yesterday's contests had to be decided by a clear majority, a plurality will carry a candidate into office next Sunday.

Only half of the cantons in France's 89 departments are voting and these were chosen by lot. There are a total og 3028 cantons.

The official figures issued by the Ministry of Interior tonight were:

The other 209 seats were scattered among small splinter parties of both right and left.

Truman Calls For a World Free of Fears

President Truman said yesterday the American people want a peaceful world "free of the fears of war, free of oppression, and free of want."

Mr. Truman's message was read in Persian at the opening of the new series of broadcasts to Iran by the State Department's "Voice of America."

The broadcasts will be beamed daily on the Middle Eastern country, which has been a recent target of Soviet propaganda. One announced purpose is to correct "Soviet distortions" about the United States.

On the opening broadcast, Vice President Barkley said that "our admiration goes to the Iranian people for their past resistance to anti-democratic forces." Assistant Secretary of State George V. Allen, former Ambassador to Iran, and Hussein Alla, Iranian Ambassador to the United States, also spoke. The program coincided with Iran's New Year holiday.

The text of Mr. Truman's message:

"On behalf of the people of the United States, I take great pleasure in extending cordial greetings and best wishes to the people of Iran on this, the first Persian-language broadcast of the Voice of America.

"It is my sincere hope that this program will serve to strengthen the historic bond of friendship which already links the Iranian and the American peoples. We look forward to a period of continued goodwill and of increased understanding between your nation and mine.

"Such understanding will help toward the creation of the kind of world the American people and their Government most desire: A peaceful world, free of the fears of war, free of oppression, and free of want; a prosperous world in which peoples of every creed, color and nationality can live together as good neighbors in friendship and fellowship.

"I am certain that your people and ours stand earnestly together in this desire. May the new year, which you celebrate today, see great achievement toward the goal of peace and freedom for all mankind."

Aid Bill Is Amended To Guard Investors

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

American investors in Marshall Plan countries could get guarantees against business losses by riot, revolution or expropriation under an amendment tentatively approved yesterday by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

This sweeping provision was written into the bill amid reports that the House committee is weighing the advisability of a sizable cut in the authorization to extend the European Recovery Plan for another 15 months.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has already reported out its version of the same legislation without change in the $5,580,000,000 sought by the Economic Cooperation Administration to continue the recovery aid through June 30, 1950.

Almost Complete, Kee Says

Despite the reports that the House committee might cut the authorization, however, Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.) told reporters yesterday that committee action on the bill is almost complete and he forecast no significant change in the legislation.

The expanded guarantee provision came as an amendment introduced by Representative A. A. Ribicoff (D., Conn.), a freshman member of the committee.

The present guarantee provision only assures that profits from approved private business ventures will be converted from foreign currency into dollars—not to exceed the amount originally invested. Only a small number of such guarantees have been sought, to the disappointment of both Congress and ECA.

Ribicoff's amendment would remove that guarantee limit, making it apply to whatever figure the profits may reach, and would also guarantee the investment against war, riot, revolution, seizure, confiscation, expropriation or any such interference.

$300,000,000 Limit Set

He said this would be "handled by a note transaction," and would not involve any immediate outlay, but would be limited to 300 million dollars in guarantees.

The existing legislation authorizes up to 300 million dollars in guarantees out of one billion dollars in public debt funds, authorized by the act.

The Senate Committee, in its report, noted that as there was little request for such guarantee funds, all but 20 million dollars of the one-billion-dollar fund was used, mostly for loans, in the 1948-49 period.

It authorized only the same type of guarantee program during the coming year, after noting that:

"The (Senate) committee felt that . . . broadening the terms of the guarantees would not result in substantial amounts of increased investments unless the guarantee was made so broad that, in fact, this Government would assume most of the risks which private capital should be expected to carry."

$200,000,000 Slash Reported Agreed On

By The Associated Press

House Foreign Affairs Committee members reported tentative agreement yesterday on a $200 million cut in the new Marshall Plan authorization.

But they said this may be offset by another provision of the bill designed to make $300 million in private investment funds available for European recovery.

The $200 million cut, members said, would be effected this way:

1. An Administration request for $1,150,000,000 to last from April 3 until June 30 would be trimmed $50 million.

2. An Administration request to permit ECA to commit the Government to spend an extra $150 million around the middle of 1950, if funds run out then, would be denied.

The $300 million in private investment, it is hoped, would be spurred by the guarantee amendment the committee has approved. If United States investors put the $300 million into foreign operations, members said, it will mean that the Government has to put up that much less, unless the investments become subject to Federal reimbursement under the guarantee provision.

Sailor Who Said He Was Coerced Held as Deserter

Alameda Calif., March 21 (AP).—The Navy placed Seaman James Patrick Ryan in formal custody as a suspected deserter today when he arrived from the Orient by plane. Ryan, who says he was shanghaied into the French Foreign Legion in 1947, will be sent to Bethesda, Md.

Ryan insists he did not desert but the French have stated officially he enlisted in the Foreign Legion. They denied he was shanghaied.

The sailor told newsmen he got drunk and passed out in San Reno, Italy, and woke up three days later; that some Italians smuggled him across the border into Nice, France, where French police picked him up. They thought he was a German and, "before I knew it I was in the Foreign Legion."

Ryan says he was shipped to French Indo-China, serving about 18 months there before escaping to North China.

Soviet Exports to U. S. Show 75 Per Cent Drop in Month

Russian exports to the United States dropped 75 per cent in January to the lowest point since the United States imposed a ban a year ago on shipments of industrial goods of "war potential" to the Soviet.

The Census Bureau, reporting this yesterday, noted that Russian shipments of two strategic materials the United States is stockpiling against a war emergency—managanese and chrome—dropped to $1,200,000 in January from $2,700,000 in December.

Officials said this might indicate that the Russians were commencing to carry out reported threats to curtail Soviet shipments of manganese and chrome, but that a single month's developments could not be considered conclusive.

They pointed out that Russia sent no manganese and chrome (both steel hardening metals) whatsoever to the United States in January, 1948. At that time the United States had given no sign it would invoke the ban.

Total Russian shipments to this country in January were $1,600,000 a $5,000,000 decline from December. Shipments of furs fell to $1,000,000 from $2,900,000 in December.

United States shipments to Russia fell 60 per cent themselves, from $500,000 in December to $200,000 in January. The next effect was that Russia's January shipments here exceeded her receipts from the United States by $1,400,000.

Shipments to and receipts from eastern Europe, meaning Finland and Russia and her satellites, both fell during January. The same was true of shipments to and receipts from the Mashall Plan countries, both in western Europe and in Asia (China and Turkey).

Italian Reds Fail in Bid To Block Pact

Rome, March 21 (U.P.).—Communists tried unsuccessfully to stall Senate discussion of the Atlantic Pact tonight after Foreign Minister Count Carlo Sforza had opened debate with the assertion that Russia had split Europe with her aggressive policy.

The Communists yielded to the majority after Communist Mauro Scoccimarro, former Minister of Finance, bitterly denounced the government's foreign policy. He had demanded that the pact be sidetracked in the froeign affairs committee "for a careful study."

Elder spokesman and Senate President Ivanoe Bonomi controlled the Senate coolly in contrast to the turbulent filibuster sessions last week in the House of Deputies. He gave four senators a chance to dispute the Scoccimarro motion and then killed the proposal with a show-of-hands vote.

Sforza spoke to a quiet, orderly session as Communist labor bosses addressed trade union meetings throughout Italy on a form of action against the Atlantic Pact.

Sforza asked the Senate to join the Chamber of Deputies in authorizing the government to negotiate for participation in the Atlantic Pact which he called "the most perfect defensive organization history has ever known."

The Communists have made it clear they would not attempt a filibuster in the Senate—a decision apparently prompted by desire to devote their full time to the labor program.

"The only way for Italy to remain in a position to continue working for peace and to provide for her security is to join the Atlantic Pact," Sforza said.

He said Russia already had violated the spirit of the United Nations agreement with excessive use of the veto.

U. S. Visas Refused To 'Peace' Delegates

New York, March 21 (AP).—The leader of the forthcoming "World Peace" conference said tonight that American visas for 12 European and South American delegates have been denied or revoked.

Dr. Harlow Shapley said the action affected four British delegates, four Italian, three French and one Brazilian, and called on the United States State Department "to take immediate action to grant the visas."

The conference, sponsored by the National Council of Arts Sciences and Professions, opens a three-day session here Friday. The State Department has said the meeting will be a sounding board for Communist propaganda.

Shapley, chairman of the council, said visas were issued and then revoked in the case of four Britishers:

J. D. Bernal, crystallographer and member of the Ministry of Works' advisory committee of building research and development; J. G. Crowther, scientist and writer; Louis Golding, novelist; and Will Olaf Stapledon, philosopher and psychologist.

He said three French delegates were denied visas: Abbe Jean Boulier, religious leader; Mme. Eugenie Cotton, researchist and president of the pro-Communist Women's International Democratic Federation; and Paul Eluard, Communist poet.

Shapely said Actress Maria Michi had been refused a visa in Italy, and Painter Candido Portenari had been denied one in Brazil.

In Paris today a spokesman for the American embassy said the three French delegates had been refused visas because they had no official status.

Twenty-two delegates from countries behind the "iron curtain" have been granted visas.

Meanwhile, a rival conference said that two agents of the Russian secret police will accompany a Soviet delegation to the conference.

A representative of Americans for Intellectual Freedom, who asked thtat his name be withheld, identified the alleged agents as Ivan Rozhansky, secretary of the delegation, and A. A. Fadeev, secretary general of the secretariat of the Union of Soviet writers.

The Americans for intellectual freedom was organized recently in opposition to the Cultural and Scientific Conference for World Peace, which opens a three-day session Friday.

The AIF spokesman said the two alleged agents had been sent with the delegation to "protect" composer Dmitri Shostakovich and others in the group from "any anti-Soviet contacts."

Americans for Intellectual Freedom has said it will hold a counter-rally Saturday to voice opposition to the so-called peace parley.

Founders of the AIF are Dr. Sidney Hook, professor of philosophy at New York University, and Dr. George S. Counts, a professor at Teachers College here.

Shostakovich Denied Hall in Philadelphia

Philadelphia, March 21 (U.P.).—The Philadelphia Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions tonight was denied the use of Town Hall for the scheduled appearance of Dmitri Shostakovich, Russian composer, on March 30. The refusal was announced after two veterans' organizations protested.

Diplomatic Visas Denied To 7 Russian Delegates

Moscow, March 21 (U.P.).—Composer Dimitri Shostakovich and six companions who left New York yesterday to attend the "cultural and Scientific Congress for World Peace," failed to get diplomatic visas from the United States, it was made known today.

They had diplomatic passports from the Russian governments, but they received only the usual visas. Diplomatic visas would have given them full immunity to customs regulations and to ordinary legal process.

A good part of her wardrobe, she said, still is in her apartment in McLean Gardens here, the rent for which has been paid for March. Her brother, Bert, was given permission in New York to come down and get her clothes and other effects, she explained, but was unable to make the trip.

Miss Coplon raised her foot, took off a shoe, and turned it over. The sole was almost worn through.

"Thirty thousand dollars bond and a hole in my shoe," she said, laughing.

Before she put up the $10,000 yesterday, she had posted $20,000 bond in New York.

This conversation took place while she was in the criminal clerk's office. She had been fingerprinted and was waiting for Attorney Palmer, who was in another office arranging for the bond. When somebody asked her where the lawyer was, she answered with a line from the nursery rhyme:

"The king is in his counting house, counting out his money . . ."

She said that some of the newspaper descriptions of her had been flattering and recalled that the New York Times had said she was "plain."

Attorney Palmer and Miss Coplon came down from New York by plane. In District Court, they had to wait while Judge Keech instructed the jury in a murder case. When the question of $10,000 bond for Miss Coplon arose, the lawyer argued that it wasn't necessary—that the girl already was under $20,000 bond in New York, and if she was found guilty there she could hardly be tried a second time here.

"Don't let me try two cases," said Judge Keech.

Palmer went on to say that, if Miss Coplon were freed in the New York case, it would be a violation of the "double jeopardy" principle if she were then tried here.

Raymond P. Whearty, special assistant to the Attorney General, who is handling the prosecution for the Department of Justice, insisted on the bond. He recalled that Miss Coplon had made a "superlative effort" to avoid detection. Should she decide to be a fugitive from justice, he said, it would "be very difficult to apprehend her."

Palmer continued to protest, and Judge Keech said: "You've expressed yourself, and I've fixed bond at $10,000."

In telling reporters, first in the courtroom and later in the press room that Miss Coplon all the time was gathering material for a novel, Palmer said she was a very serious-minded young woman. He recalled that she was an honor graduate of Barnard College in New York, had been editor of the school's paper, and had tried to enroll in the Columbia University Journalism School.

"She was not good-looking enough to be too attractive to men," Palmer said.

And so, he said, she decided to make use of her position in the Government to write a novel. Washington is the heart of the Nation, he said, and she felt that she would have something to say that would be of interest to the world.

She wasn't content, he said, just to wait for something to happen to her such as happened to Cinderella.

"Have you ever read the 'American Tragedy' by Theodore Dreiser?" Palmer asked. "Remember the murder?"

Well, he said, Miss Coplon planned to do a lot of research for her novel just as Dreiser had done before writing his.

A reporter wanted to know about the typewritten summaries of intelligence reports which FBI agents said were in Miss Coplon's purse when they arrested her and Gubitchev in New York on the night of March 4. The Government claims the documents disclosed not only what the United States knew about foreign spies in this country, but what the United States was doing to combat them.

Was this material for Miss Coplon's novel? Palmer was asked.

"I can't answer that," he said.

He said he had read in the newspapers that Miss Coplon still had the documents in her purse at the time she and Gubitchev were arrested. Why, he wanted to know, didn't the FBI agents wait until she had actually passed the documents?

Miss Coplon appeared to be serene throughout her visit to the courthouse. As she and Palmer were leaving to catch a plane back to New York, however, the lawyer said she was in a highly nervous state, primarily because her father had just suffered a seventh stroke.

Samuel M. Coplon, the father, now an invalid in his Brooklyn home, is a toy manufacturer, who used to play Santa Claus to the children in the Adirondack Mountains. He gave them $10,000 worth of toys in 1935, the twenty-fifth anniversary of his annual pilgrimage into the mountains.

Trial of 11 Reds Is Started

New York, 21 (AP).—The trial of 11 top U. S. Communists, finally got under way before a jury today with a Government charge that the defendants hold the key to an American revolution.

The 11 can set the time for an uprising of "force and violence," U. S. Attorney John F. McGohey said in his opening remarks to a Federal Court jury.

He accused the defendants of teaching in classes and schools that the overthrow of the U. S. Government must follow the "classic model" of the 1917 Revolution in Russia.

The defense, through its chief spokesman, went before the jury in turn to insist that the party never has raised a hand against the U. S. Government.

Eugene Dennis, secretary general of the Communist Party in this country, said the party consistently has taught the support of the U. S. Government.

"It is a matter of public record," said Dennis, who is acting as his own attorney, "that we supported the Roosevelt Administration and vigorously campaigned for his re-election."

Dennis said the defense will seek to "expose the sinister purpose behind this heresy trial."

"The foreboding-sounding words, 'overthrow the U. S. Government by force and violence' appear five times in the indictment," Dennis argued, "but not once does the indictment charge that these Communist leaders committed a single overt act against the U. S. Government or attempted its forceful overthrow."

The 11 are accused of conspiring to organize the party in this country in 1945 to advocate violent overthrow of the Government. If convicted, they would face maximum penalties of 10 years in prison and $10,000 fines each.

Dennis tried to outline at length the Communist Party's attitude on domestic and foreign issues. Federal Judge Harold R. Medina, who is hearing the case with a jury of seven women and five men, interrupted Dennis.

"I can't see that they have anything to do with the case," Medina said. "The fact that you advocated a lot of other things is not involved here."

Later he interrupted Dennis' outline of the party's postwar stand.

"We are not going to have that," said the court. "We might be here for years trying this case. I direct you not to go ahead with it."

After some argument, Judge Medina relented and said:

"I think I'd better let Mr. Dennis go ahead. I'm going to let him go ahead and get it off his chest."

Finally, Judge Medina said:

"Now, Mr. Dennis, that's the end. You will now kindly desist."

And the court added:

"You're going to be a terrible problem to me."

The jury began hearing the opening arguments after 38 days of argument and delay during which the defense tried a number of ways to halt or postpone the trial.

McGohey told the jurors that the 11 defendants form the national board of the Communist Party in this country. They can set the time for a revolution, he maintained.

"Carrying out such a revolution, said McGohey, "cannot be done without force or violence."

In "secret, remote, rural camps," and in places "never open to the public," the Government attorney went on, advanced pupils of American communism are schooled in tactics of the Russian revolution.

Ho Fills All Cabinet Jobs

Nanking, China, March 21 (U.P.).—New Premier Ho Ying-chin completed his "appeasement" cabinet today, sweeping out of office the ultra-rightwing elements who wanted to fight the Communists to the bitter end.

Simultaneously legislative Yuan (Parliament) members moved to help Ho continue the fight if necessary, while the control Yuan handed over to law enforcement agencies resolutions of censure and impeachment against outgoing Premier Sun Fo, charged with misappropriating government funds.

The CC clique, which is led by Chen Li-Fu, loses control of the important Ministry of Interior for the first time since the Nationalist government was formed, that post going to Li Han-Yun, chief of Li's presidential staff.

Another significant appointment was that of Fu Ping-chang, Chinese Ambassador to Moscow since 1943, as Foreign Minister.

Observers considered the appointment the prelude to a major revision of Chinese foreign policy, veering toward Moscow in an effort to make peace with the Communists.

Israel Discussion Set

The Holy Land and Israel's new role in world democracy will be discussed at the final session of the Washington Anti-Defamation League's Seminar series at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday in Cafritz Auditorium, Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts., nw.

Israel Agrees To Evacuate 14 Villages

Tel Aviv, Israel, March 21 (AP).—Informants said today the new Israeli-Lebanese armistice calls for the evacuation of 14 villages in Lebanon still held by Israeli forces. The Lebanese now hold no territory in Israel.

The armistice also provides for the demilitarization of zones 6 to 12 miles wide on both sides of the frontier. Each state will be allowed a defensive force of only 1500 men in those zones. Other troops there now will be pulled back.

A prisoner exchange and the return of Lebanese villagers to their homes also is included in the agreement, initialed at En Naqura, Lebanon, last night by Israeli and Lebanese negotiators. Formal signing is scheduled for Wednesday.

The agreement is the second the young Jewish State has reached with one of its Arab neighbors. The first was signed at Rhodes, February 24 between Israel and Egypt.

Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, acting United Nations mediator, said at Rhodes today that Syria has accepted an invitation to talk over an armistice with Israel.

According to unconfirmed reports heard in Rhodes, Israel and Trans-Jordan will be ready to sign an armistice this weekend.

Meanwhile, a British Foreign Office spokesman in London said Trans-Jordan had asked the British for military aid in defending her southern border with Israel.

British troops now are garrisoning Aquaba, Trans-Jordan's outlet on the Red Sea, under terms of a treaty between the two countries.

Later a Trans-Jordan official in Amman was reported to have denied that his government had asked additional help from Britain. Commenting on this, the British spokesman declared: "What we said earlier today is still correct."

An Israeli foreign office spokesman in Tel Aviv said Israel would regard it as "a serious breach" of the present Palestine truce if British troops took over defense of the Trans-Jordan frontier.

Poland Getting U. S. Material

Paris, March 21 (NYHT).—American automotive equipment, of potential military value and critically needed for reconstruction of western Europe, is being imported into France and re-exported to Communist-controlled Poland in violation of Marshall Plan legislation, it was learned today.

Specific evidence of apparent violations of the foreign assistance act involving the Ford Societe Anonyme, a French company under the effective control of the American Ford Motor Co., has been uncovered by the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune.

According to the information placed in the hands of officials of the Economic Cooperation Administration, the French Ford Co. shipped in December and January more than three million francs (about $10,000) worth of scarce tractor and truck parts, including precision ball bearings, to Poland. Present orders on hand for early delivery total 20 million francs (more than $60,000) and future delivery schedules total more than 200 million francs.

At the modern Ford plant at Poissy, outside Paris, H. Cola, chief of the spare parts division, admitted yesterday that a few critical American-made spare parts, including ball bearings, had been shipped to Poland, but insisted that the number was very small and that at least "85 per cent" were of French manufacture. He said they were to service trucks, cars and tractors which had been sold to Poland. He conceded that present orders from the Polish purchasing agent in Paris totaled 20 million francs.

Balance Sheet Delayed

Publication of the 1949 Inaugural Committee's financial balance sheet, expected yesterday, was held up pending final settlement of claims and congressional decision on tax exemption of inaugural tickets.

Hiss Perjury Trial Put Off to April 11

New York, March 21 (AP).—Federal Judge Simon H. Rifkind today adjourned until April 11 the trial of Alger Hiss, former State Department official indicted for perjury by a spy-probing grand jury.

The adjournment was agreed to by both counsel for Hiss and the Government.

The indictment accuses Hiss of testifying falsely when he told the grand jury he did not give secret Government papers to Whittaker Chambers. Chambers is an admitted former courier for a Communist spy ring.

Hiss is on leave from his $20,000 a year post as president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Dr. Wise Defends Criticized Sermon

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise yesterday answered an attack by 10 Catholic University professors on a sermon of his with the statement that he stands by "every sentence and word of the sermon under attack."

The 75-year-old head of the American Jewish Congress declared that the professors "ignored context and sequence" of his sermon, and said, "I commend to them the admonition of our common moral heritage: 'Thou shalt not bear false witness.'"

Dr. Wise's sermon was delivered Friday in a defense of the Rev. William Howard Melish, whose father recently was ousted as rector of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, Brooklyn. Young Melish is chairman of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, a group included on the Attorney General's subversive list.

Associated Press stories quoted Dr. Wise as saying that "the largest of Christian churches is unequivocally for war" and "is using its great influence to war upon the atheism—I do not say godlessness—of the Soviet regime." The story quoted Wise as saying the leadership of this country "seems bent on war."

Saturday the Catholic University professors denounced Dr. Wise's statement as "a wanton attempt to spread distrust of American leadership in world affairs and to stir up hatred and dissension among the American people."

In his reply, Dr. Wise declared that his "humble but long and consistent efforts to sustain American world leadership on the highest level and in behalf of Americans of all races and creeds" are "the best refutation of this malicious allegation."

Dr. Wise also declared that the professors' "disingenuous methods cannot but leave them open to the suspicion that they seek to silence those of all faiths whose views on foreign and domestic affairs may differ from their own. . . ."

"The professors of the Catholic University cannot silence the free expression of opinion by impugning the motives of Americans whose convictions and views are a matter of public record," he stated.

In his reply Dr. Wise quoted the following statements from his sermon:

"Melish looks upon our country putting its thought and substance and devotion into preparing for what its leadership believes to be the inevitable war of our country and the Soviet Union. He stands horrified, as I do, before the grim prospect . . .

"I know that the Soviet Union or command is all but unendurably trying and unforgivably provocative, particularly some of its intolerably disingenuous American disciples, but the alternative is the tragedy of tragedies.

"If the political and governmental leadership of our country were as resolved upon peace as it seems to be upon war, American-Soviet friendship groups might be superfluous."

Rent Control Passage Nears

can be taken and the bill voted into law.

Initial debate on the Senate measure yesterday saw Administration forces lined up with Southern Democrats and Republicans forming most of the opposition.

The Senate version of rent control would give landlords two automatic rent increases of 5 per cent—the first on October 1, 1949, and the second on April 1, 1950. The rent increases would not be permitted if the rents had already been increased by 15 per cent over June, 1947, and the terms of any existing leases would have to be observed.

States could take over the controls if they provided the machinery or they could end rent ceilings in any area within their borders if the legislature so voted.

GOP forces led by Senators Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and Arthur Vandenberg (R., Mich.) questioned Subcommittee Chairman John Sparkman (D., Ala.) on why the State Legislatures had been substituted for the House "local option" provisions which allow municipalities and county authorities to decontrol.

Sparkman replied that the constitutionality of delegation of such authority to local communities rather than States is dubious and that furthermore small local governing bodies are more subject to pressure groups than State Legislatures.

The Banking Committee chairman led off the debate by urging passage on grounds "there is no more important legislation in terms of the pocketbook, the health and welfare of millions.

Sparkman declared "there can be no doubt as to the disastrous effect of doing away with rent controls at this time."

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) led off an attack on rent controls last night with the charge that it means "involuntary servitude for millions of thrifty, God-fearing American property owners."

He said he would offer two amendments, one to include the House-approved formula requiring that landlords be guaranteed "a fair return" on their investments, and the other to lift controls from units covered by the so-called voluntary 15 per cent increase leases if they expire before April 1, 1948. The measure as it now stands would freeze such rents at the 15 per cent level.

Senator Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.) said he and several others would sponsor an amendment to restore controls on hotel accommodations only in cities of more than 500,000.

He said also he would sponsor an amendment to prevent Rent Control Administrator Tighe E. Woods from recontrolling areas which had been freed from ceilings by court action. He and members of the committee said the amendment was acceptable to Woods.

St. Louis, March 21 (U.P.).—The head of an emergency fact-finding board appointed by President Truman to investigate the seven-day Wabash Railroad strike warned today that the walkout threatened the Railway Labor Act.

Utah Supreme Court Chief Justice Roger McDonough spoke when the striking operating brotherhoods failed to answer the board's request that they return to their jobs at once pending the board's decision on the issues in dispute.

2 Girls Slashed 400 Times, Youth Held After Revel

San Diego, Calif., March 21 (AP).—Two 16-year-old girls were in a hospital today with hundreds of pocket knife stabs and cuts.

Police said they were attacked as a climax of a teen-age drinking and petting party. Salvador Colabelle, 17, was held.

Each girl was stabbed or slashed on the neck, breast and arms at least 200 times. Police said three couples, all high school students, staged the Saturday night party, with wine and gin in shacks at an abandoned Government auto trailer court.

It was after a "switch of dates" to separate shacks, detectives said, that the girls were knifed. They quoted Colabelle as saying he was in love with one girl and became jealous.

Dramatic Groups Plan Tournament Of One-Act Plays

Sixteen amateur dramatic groups from Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia will compete in a one-act play tournament beginning March 29 at the Roosevelt High School under sponsorship of the District Recreation Department.

The groups will include the Rockville Players, Falls Church Little Theater, the Montgomery Players, Jewish Lion's Club and the Mount Vernon Players. The final plays will be held at the school April 9.

A one-act play tournament scheduled to begin last night at the Armstrong High School auditorium was cancelled as the auditorium was being painted.

French President Ill

Paris, March 21 (U.P.).—President Vncent Auriol, 64, was confined to his room today because of illness, his office announced. The announcement said he has been forced to cancel all appointments for the next several days.

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny

My telephone table in the hall is a regular "catch-all" for books, magazines, old letters and recipes. This morning, I noticed that the telephone receiver was propped up on some of these books and what-have-you. I'd just put it back on the hook when someone rang the doorbell.

It was a young man from the telephone company. He said one of the other parties on my party line had reported his telephone out-of-order. He explained that when one receiver was off the hook, it took the whole line out of service. When he asked me if I would check my telephone, I turned a deep shade of crimson and told him what I'd discovered.

I made a note then and there to put a sign up over the telephone. In big, bold letters, I wrote, "Always replace the receiver carefully after each call."

Spring In The Air

At the risk of being contradicted by the first available snowstorm, we take occasion to welcome spring to the Nation's Capital. Some sort of formality is necessary this year because, without the weatherman around to report on passage of the equinox, a lot of people would not have noticed the difference. To be sure, there have been a number of vernal portents. The United States Conference of Mayors has brought a breath of freshness to Washington in its annual meeting; the armed services have been conducting their yearly appropriation demonstrations; Congress is again squabbling over daylight saving. But so far the balm has been strictly through sufferance. February was the warmest on record, and the whole winter has been nondescript.

All along, indeed, there has been something almost illicit about the burgeoning of springtime activity. The indefatigable Hains Point bicyclists must have harbored at least an inward fear of sudden raw winds. The motorists who have succumbed to the urge to hone up their limousines, the gardeners who have strained their backs, have done so in the knowledge that it all might be in vain. Even the cherry buds that have darted forth and the forsythia have run the risk of giving the already green Potomac willows something to weep about. Actually we ourselves saw the cherry trees in the old Japanese Embassy in blossom as long ago as a week before Christmas.

Now the buds can blossom, the children can catch the measles, the housewives can litter their homes with spring cleaning in the knowledge that they are no longer doing so on borrowed weather. From now on any backlash of winter will be viewed as a distinctly unfriendly act.

FBI Methods

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover does not mince words in his defense of the procedures used by his agency in loyalty investigations. In an article in the Yale Law Journal he denies emphatically that the FBI uses wire tapping in loyalty probes, and adds that this device is employed only in a narrow category of cases and then with the approval of the Attorney General in each instance. Mr. Hoover's reply was occasioned by an earlier article by Prof. Thomas I. Emerson and David M. Helfeld which charged, among other things, that the efficiency rating of FBI investigators depended upon how much unfavorable information they could dig up. This Mr. Hoover describes as a "libel."

One of Mr. Hoover's innuendoes seems a little in that category itself. To Messrs. Emerson and Helfeld's expressed fear that the FBI is moving in the direction of a secret police, Mr. Hoover retorts that he has seen such opinions most frequently set forth in the Daily Worker. This is an unnecessary slur upon persons who, with no sympathy for communism, feel troubled over the dilemma confronting a Nation trying to contain totalitarian threats without using totalitarian methods. There should be more charity and understanding over disagreements as to methods in attaining an agreed-upon object. There are many ways of skinning a cat, but if we are all supposed to accept the official way without question, the country would be headed for totalitarianism.

The bulk of Mr. Hoover's remarks, however, are reassuring. It should occasion no surprise that the FBI uses paid informers. But there have been many rumors, most of which defy checking, about the extent of wire tapping in the Government. Mr. Hoover has done well to absolve the FBI. This of course does not preclude the possibility that other Government agencies have indulged in wire tapping of their own. Such a possibility, we believe, demands a clarification of the Communications Act by Congress. So does the interception of telephone messages by the FBI in cases affecting the national security. If such methods are necessary, they should be explicitly recognized in the law and should not rely on a tenuous interpretation by the Attorney General.

Although most of the loyalty investigations are now completed, Mr. Hoover's defense leaves one big unanswered question in what is at best a delicate and sometimes dirty business. If the circumstances uncovered by the FBI are so serious as to warrant the impugning of a person's loyalty, do they not also warrant elementary court safeguards including the right to cross-examine his accusers?

Arms Policy

The real test of the peaceful intent of the North Atlantic treaty will come in the way that the arms policy under it is managed. The entire world of nations is itching to get its hands on American munitions. In Paris Secretary Marshall was almost pestered to death with requests. On his return he told a story of a delegate from an Eastern country who one day pleaded with him for a consignment and the next day went out with General Marshall on a shooting trip and shot all his pheasants! Hardly the way to make an impression on the general! The anxiety to acquire American weapons explains in part the rush to join the North Atlantic Pact.

It is now said that the budget of the arms program will not exceed $1,800,000,000. How much outmoded equipment will be given away, in addition, is problematical. Congress seems also to have received a private assurance that exports in the first year will not be significant. This assurance was given in response to the fears expressed several months ago that nonmilitary deliveries under the Marshall Plan would lose precedence. Several times we have ourselves voiced those fears. Arms exports, it is now said, will not have priority. This assurance will certainly come as a relief to the officials of the Organization of European Economic Cooperation in Paris, the European counterpart of the ECA in Washington. For it was in that quarter that the liveliest anxiety on this score found expression. What was feared was nothing short of a threat to recovery coming from the military program. Arms exports in substantial amount might have led to a diversion of European as well as American energies in maintaining, servicing and supporting the arms received from America.

The policy on arms aid, as well as the extent of it, is of equal importance in demonstrating that the North Atlantic Pact is wholly defensive. If we have stressed this before, it is because of experience. Over 90 per cent of the arms sent to China have fallen into the hands of the Chinese Communists. The traffic has alienated the Chinese people. Was there any wisdom in this arms policy? There was a similar pressure, in this case unsuccessful, to arm Latin America. Of late nothing has been heard of the hemisphere arms pact, perhaps because of sundry captures of Latin-American governments by military juntas—events which reinforced the argument against a comprehensive arms program. These experiences accounted for our own misgivings over the working out of the arms policy toward Europe when it was originally bruited.

Since this time many fantastic ideas have been ventilated. There was, for instance, the brainstorm that it would be a good thing to see that Spitzbergen be fixed up as a base. How crazy! Any such course, aside from goading Moscow, would mean presenting the Russians, in China fashion, with American equipment as soon as war broke out. Another unthinking idea was to build airfields in Iran and station there a hundred or so fighter planes so that they would be handy to serve as escorts for American bombers having Baku as target. This kind of thinking comes under the how-to-provoke-trouble-by-anticipating-it heading.

However, these notions were voiced when the military seemed to be having too much say on high policy. "Give the military control of policy," a famous British Foreign Minister once said, "and they would fortify the moon." There are indications nowadays of the development of sobriety in the working out of the arms policy corollary to the North Atlantic Pact. The State Department, in the person of Assistant Secretary of State Ernest Gross, has a hand in it. And General Eisenhower, whose strategical sense is tempered with statesmanship, is back in Washington, and may, as we hope he will, be given a role in the North Atlantic organization. The arms we supply to Europe should be defensive, and should be used mainly for furnishing the sinews for a continentalized defense system. In unity lies the truest security—the unity that Russia has and the Western world hasn't. The dilution of the pact by its extension beyond the original limits must not be compounded by the scattering of American resources.

Oak Ridge

The significance of the opening of the Oak Ridge community to the public goes far beyond the mere removal of fences from the area where some 36,000 atomic energy workers live. The occasion was viewed by Senator McMahon as symbolic of an extension of the freedom of the mind—an extension which uphappily is still thwarted by the Soviet Union and which can be complete only with the relaxation of all such barriers under effective international control of atomic energy.

Since early in the war, Oak Ridge has been a city of hermits. Now the Atomic Energy Commission has narrowed the security area to the actual atom plant section of the Tennessee community, and the residents are free to come and go from their homes without passes. Possibly those few members of Congress who became incensed over the Atomic Energy Commission report giving the already published location of atomic installations will rise to protest this new "disclosure." But among most thinking people the opening will be regarded as a sensible desecretization of facilities only remotely connected with the safeguarding of vital defense information.

Indeed, the Oak Ridge opening is the counterpart of the effort now being pushed by the commission and the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy to bring more nonsecret atomic energy information to the public. This information is necessary not only to encourage more nonmilitary progress in use of atomic energy, but also to debunk many irrational fears and old wives' tales and to gain a realistic appreciation of our defense position. With atomic energy as in other forms of military information, the danger is that preoccupation with the outward forms of security will blind us as to what our security really consists of.

David E. Lilienthal, who by no means underestimates the necessity for preserving basic technical data, made the point well when he said: "Guards and fences and secret stamps on documents do not provide real security. It is an open and competitive atmosphere that best calls forth the good, new fresh ideas, the best efforts of men and women."

Expert Draftsmen

Senator McGrath is disturbed because the press gave little attention to the testimony of Gerald D. Morgan that he was paid by the Republican National Committee for drafting a labor bill for the House in 1947. Apparently the Senator had expected the press to register a sort of righteous and at the same time partisan indignation. It seems to us a credit to the press that it did not lose its sense of proportion. Use of the Republican Party funds to pay a lawyer who should have been on the congressional payroll is undoubtedly a political blunder. But no objective person is likely to see anything either criminal or disgraceful in it.

The public interest certainly demands that any group of Congressmen working on complicated legislative problems should have expert legal assistance in the drafting of its bills. The Administration has many lawyers on the public payroll who are used to draft bills for carrying out the majority platform pledges. That practice has come to be accepted in spite of the widespread conviction that bills should be drafted in Congress. When the Taft-Hartley Act was written, the Republicans were in control of both houses, but had no official battery of legal draftsmen at their disposal. They could not be asked to rely upon Administration lawyers. They might have used the Legislative Counsel's office, but some Republicans are reported to feel that, while the Legislative Counsel renders impartial drafting service, some of its lawyers leak information to the opposing party as to the nature of the legislation they are helping to shape. Unquestionably the sponsors of the labor bill in 1947 were entitled to hire legal talent that would neither reflect the Administration's view nor prematurely disclose the new plan to the opposition.

The mistake that was made was in not going to congressional sources for an independent lawyer. Mr. Morgan could have been hired by one of the interested committees for the period that he worked on the labor bill. Thanks to the Congressional Reorganization Act, committees now have greater leeway in employing experts to assist in their work. More and not less of this kind of service is needed. While a legal draftsman paid by the Republican National Committee may not be more partisan than a lawyer hired for the same purpose by the Democratic Administration, the proper course is to hire law-drafting talent through the machinery of Congress itself.

Pyramid Bubble

The strange fascination of mulcting dollars from one's neighbors, pyramid fashion, appears to have encountered something of a setback. Daniel A. Thomas, the bricklayer who has been described by one of his attorneys as the originator of the Pyramid Clubs here, has been indicted on a charge of "managing, carrying on and promoting a lottery." The grand jury apparently sees something sinister in the idea of shaking down your friends and getting them to shake down their friends until you have a reward amounting to $2048. No doubt many of the gullible Washingtonians who have shelled out their dollars in the foolish expectation that they too might reach the apex of a pyramid before it falls apart will agree with the grand jury. But the general view seems to be that pyramiding is a sort of harmless mania that can't hurt anyone much before the blow-up comes.

Frankly, we regard the movement as more psychopathic than criminal. Fantastic schemes of this sort, like pole sitting and marathon dancing, can lay hold of the minds of people only in periods of acute tension or prolonged boredom. Seeking relief from the same old mental diet day after day, human beings have been indulging in some of the wildest fantasies since the dancing mania of the Middle Ages. If the diversion is found to have a "taint of illegality," its popularity may even be enhanced for a time. In the case of a scheme so juvenile as the pyramid movement, however, the grand jury's indictment may prove to be only a coup de grace that hastens the inevitable.

THE COBBLER'S CHILDREN

"Cobbler's children have no shoes"
So the legend runs.
Never a twig our feet can bruise
And we are cobbler's sons.

We are shod with thistledown.
Lightly can we move.
No print is left on beaches brown,
In muddy fields no groove.

Faster than the windy stride
Blithely are we blown,
And we have boots of beetle's hide
Smoothed and shaped and sewn.

On darts of sun with lightning speed
Sportively we pass,
We scarcely toss the thimbleweed
Or bend the shaking grass.

We have shoes of mandrake roots
Laced with misty bands.
Our father makes the elfin boots
And gloves for faery hands.

Mrs. Doyle's Successor

In the resignation of Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, the District of Columbia has lost a devoted servant. Her many years of faithful service to an energy and time consuming job deserve the gratitude of all citizens of Washington.

The selection of her successor, who according to law must be a woman, should be of great concern to the people of this community. The members of the Board of Education are appointed by the Justices of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia and serve for three years without compensation. Three members are appointed each year. In addition to filling the vacancy left by Mrs. Doyle's resignation, two other appointments will be made at the customary time, July 1.

In 1946 the District of Columbia League of Women Voters prepared the following yardstick for guidance in the selection of candidates which we believe is still valid.

The legal requirement for board membership in the District of Columbia is a bona fide residence in the District for five years—that is, a citizen without a vote.

The basic qualification for any school board member is a firm belief in our public school system and the importance of its influence in developing responsible and participating citizens.

Desirable qualifications are:

Public spirit which would insure willingness to give unselfishly of time and energy for the benefit of the schools, and the realization that unselfish devotion to the community is the highest public honor attainable to the individual.

Stature in the community which would inspire confidence in those with whom he must work and serve—the officials and teachers of the school system, the students and the community.

Broad vision and an open mind which would insure fair consideration of the racial problems of the education system of the District, and of the advances made whereby education seeks to develop the full potentialities of all pupils—child and adult, the gifted and the handicapped.

Courage to make responsible decisions on the basis of complete information and to stand by them in the face of adverse criticism.

We urge that all citizens exercise their prerogative by sending to the District judges names of qualified people. Address your suggestions to Honorable Bolitha J. Laws, Chief Judge of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

MRS. JOHN F. THOMAS,
President, Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters.

Cooperative Apartments

Why all the controversy about cooperative apartments? A co-op has been the answer to my problem. The house I lived in was sold, and I was ordered to move. The idea struck me that a co-op was less expensive than a house. I investigated and obtained a two-bedroom apartment for the price I could afford to pay.

Less than a year ago we bought the building and in that short time, we have improved the entire building and each owner has added many improvements to his individual apartment, making it a comfortable home. It is kept in first class condition, all bills are paid promptly, and we have money in the bank.

When improvements are made on the building, the money is there for that purpose. The best feature is that a lady who lives alone, or elderly people who occupy a co-op, don't have grass to cut, hedges to trim, yet, we have the advantages of a beautiful yard. OWNER.

Central Family Agency

I was very much interested in the article by Mrs. Jerabek and Dr. Brigham which appeared in your March 6 issue. The suggestion of a new Cabinet post to coordinate and consolidate all material relating to the home seems well worth further study and effort to make it materialize.

Would a new Government department such as suggested mean the addition of more employes to the Government payroll? Would the cost of transferring existing agencies relating to family life to a central agency be prohibitive?

I think all of us would like more Government efficiency at less cost. If the idea outlined by Mrs. Jerabel and Dr. Brigham would accomplish this, I am all for it.

"Bedeviled Senate"

Your March 16 editorial, "Bedeviled Senate," strikes a responsive chord, I am sure, in the minds of your readers. But what is the explanation for this so-called coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats? Whom do they represent and what is it they're trying to do?

I think I understand about the Republicans. They're the people who will never learn and who, as the opposition party, seem to consider the defeat of an Administration measure, no matter how worthy, as a victory for themselves.

But the Southern Democrats I can't make out at all. Theoretically, they're Democrats but actually, as everybody knows, some of them tried awfully hard to defeat the Democratic candidate in the last election. They have no party responsibility; feel under no obligation to carry out the party platform or support the President's preelection pledges. And they don't seem to be answerable to the rank and file of their own constituents. For, if they did, surely their objective would be to raise the standards (economic as well as civil) of their people.

And as for responsibility to the country, they're Southerners first; represent the Southern States. The rest of the country, inhabited by damyankees is no concern of theirs. What is the explanation? READER.

Reactions To The Atlantic Pact

I agree heartily with your March 19 editorial on the Atlantic Pact, that some military agreement was necessary. Would that it had been stronger and bolder in its commitment of United States force, for we are today the sole adequately armed policeman on the block.

I cannot, however, agree that invocation of Article 51 makes any regional agreement conform to the spirit of the Charter of the United Nations. There was no violation of the letter of the Charter in the seizure of Czechoslovakia, but that there was a flagrant violation of the spirit seems to me incontestable.

Do we not face here a sort of schizophrenia within the U. N., a split personality where what the left hand doeth writes death to what the right hand would do? The very structure of the U. N., with its emphasis on cooperation rather than legal enforcement, seems to me the basic factor underlying the present threat to the peace, just as a similar structural deficiency in the League of Nations was the basis for a successful launching of aggression by an earlier totalitarian assault upon world order.

That the union of the free would enlarge the base of legally enforceable measures to preserve freedom seems obvious. That it would leave a vacuum in the excluded areas, a vacuum which the Kremlin propagandists would quickly fill with specious half truths, seems to me equally clear. Meantime, the armament race must go merrily on, the sands of sole possession of atomic weapons trickle from the democratic hour glass, and the clock unstayed, ticks toward Armageddon. MARY-STUART CHAMBERLAIN.

Washington.

Locarno is upon us only three years after the second World War: half the time it took to develop similar treaties after the first World War. It is amazing to hear a level-headed statesman-like man such as Dean Acheson speak so glibly and confidently about our learning the lesson of 350 years of history.

The North Atlantic Pact does not activate the Russians to come forward with a welcoming hand in fellowship and world unity. They inevitably feel a revulsion and a fear from it. Though the Russians aggravate every problem into a crisis, we cannot expect them to be any less aggressive and more friendly by building a fence around our Western culture. Fear of them bred this pact; fear of us will breed a similar pact or some more fearsome document or act.

TED JONES.

Washington.

Henry Wallace, whatever his personal convictions, is still doggedly giving aid and comfort to the Communist Party, U. S. A. and USSR. His public reaction to the Atlantic Pact is faithful to the party line and it is being drawn in this country, judging from a United Press dispatch in your March 20 issue.

Since that line apparently is aimed at some sort of alliance with so-called reactionary elements in the United States, it served the party's aims well for Mr. Wallace to declare that the pact deprives Congress of its constitutional right to declare war and "puts it in the hands of a military staff located on the continent of Europe."

The argument might be convincing, too, if it weren't for the facts of modern life, one of which is that in another war, God forbid, the act of declaring war would be an automatic and belated recognition of an unavoidable fait accompli by the American Congress. We need look no farther back into history than December 7, 1941, to recognize that modern war leaves no time for legislative hemming and hawing.

By the terms of the pact itself, if Mr. Wallace has bothered to read it, it is also apparent that the United States, as well as each participating nation, reserves to itself the right to consider what measures are to be taken in the face of an act of war. If the act is in fact war, there will be little time or need for debate. If it is short of war, Congress will be able to make its own decision.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Republican Connivance

MEMORY brings back a scene in the Senate of the United States. It is the spring of 1935. Huey Long had the floor, badgering and harrying and frustrating the inept Democratic leadership.

With all his skill and ruthlessness he had tied the Democrats in knots and was making them squirm. Huey was on his way and there was nothing that could stop him.

On the minority side of the aisle the Republicans were laughing merrily. They enjoyed the performance and now and then they tried to help out. But Huey abruptly turned to address them directly:

"You Republicans can sit over there and tee-hee-hee and haw-haw-haw. But don't think that you're going to step in and take over when these Democrats here get kicked out. Because you're not."

The Republicans, Huey was saying, would not inherit power out of confusion and breakdown. They would not be the inevitable heirs of Democratic failure. Huey himself meant to inherit the earth and he knew that his brand of potent demagoguery would triumph over the enfeebled conservatism of the Republican Party.

Having again helped to snarl the Democratic majority in a tangled web of futility, the Republicans may think that surely this time they will profit from the confusion of their enemies. Perhaps for one congressional election they may. But for the long pull of a presidential victory it seems to me an extremely doubtful proposition.

FOR MANY who remember the promises of the campaign of last fall, what is happening looks like a failure of representative government. If the coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats holds against the major items of legislation in the Truman program, then the score for this session will be close to zero and a final judgment of failure will be justified.

For such a failure the Republicans would have to accept a large share of public responsibility. Without their aid and active connivance it would not have been possible to kill all civil rights legislation as now seems to have been done for this session at least.

Primarily, this means responsibility for the kind of leadership that engineered the coalition from the Republican side of the aisle. Senator Kenneth Wherry of Nebraska gets top credit. But a much quieter, smoother operator, Senator Owen Brewster of Maine, is given a share of credit by his colleagues which he may not be eager to accept in full public view.

Wherry is shrewd, resourceful, often blunt to the point of brutality. A successful storekeeper and undertaker, he knows how to cajole, persuade, flatter and browbeat, if necessary. Yet in his race for the Senate last fall, against a Democratic candidate who offered only token opposition, Wherry ran far behind the young liberal, Gov. Val Peterson, and even behind Presidential Candidate Thomas E. Dewey. This, it must be remembered, was in the rock-ribbed Republican State of Nebraska.

BREWSTER is the Senate's master schemer. He understands how to capitalize on every position, for the short run at any rate. While Brewster denies it, a widely held belief in Maine is that he did his best to prevent Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith from winning the senatorial nomination. Mrs. Smith received a whopping majority.

This may give too much credit to Wherry and Brewster. Another resourceful Republican operator is Senator Eugene Millikin of Colorado. In a comparatively short time in the Senate he has learned a great deal about blocking and tackling.

To box the enemy is an elementary rule of strategy in any kind of warfare. But that is only the first step to victory. Positive constructive action is essential in the next phase and it is just here that the Republicans have repeatedly failed.

An assassin's bullet stopped Huey Long in mid-career as he was expanding his power in the South and looking ahead to greater victories. The backwardness of Louisiana and then the depression had given him the opportunity to push his demagogic "every man a king" program against the background of the difficulties and failures of representative government.

Another crisis, another failure, would almost certainly produce another demagogue ready to take advantage of the opportunity. Somewhere in the dust well in the rear of his noisy progress the Republicans would still be waiting to enter the promised land.

Filibuster Safeguard

Filibustering is disgusting as a general resort, but may be a safeguard in an emergency. If obvious mistakes have been made in a program which has been planned and is about to be enacted by a majority vote on the basis of "we promised it and must keep our promise," the larger interests involved demand that a second mistake should be prevented.

When the secretary of a Negro pressure group accuses Senator McGrath of what he considers failure to keep the promise made in the Democratic platform, then some radical action must show to the Nation that pressure groups which confess they are interested wholly in their own interests should be curbed.

A Communication

Toward A Maximum Production Economy

By Leon H. Keyserling

Vice Chairman, Council of Economic Advisers

YOUR editorial of March 18 has accomplished the main purpose of my communication printed on the same day, namely to broaden the areas of agreement between us.

You state that stand-by controls "might still be a useful weapon to hold in reserve against a possible flare-up of inflation." Since we are both talking about the legislative authorization of stand-by controls so that they might promptly be used selectively, if and where needed, the difference between your view that these might be a useful weapon and my view that they should be made available by stand-by legislation seems to me slight.

Your editorial also seems in basic agreement with me on the score of economic analysis, since you express hearty accord with my statement that the country needs "a discriminating and selective combination of policies to deal with the inflationary cast and the deflationary cast at the same time."

This is the very purpose of the stabilization program. I have repeatedly made this point in recent months, in contrast to the more commonly held view that the evolving situation can be chracterized simply as "inflationary" or "deflationary" and be dealt with by the standard textbook procedures for either of these alternatives.

Your proper question as to whether the stabilization program would be discriminating in practice has light shed on it by the recent action of the Federal Reserve Board in relaxing certain types of consumer credit, a move with which the Council of Economic Advisers had previously expressed its agreement.

SINCE we seem so substantially in accord both on analysis and conclusions, perhaps little would be gained by bombarding each other further with statistics which must be selective in a short treatment. While I join The Post in watching the changing situation carefully from day to day, my most recent comprehensive review of the facts made available to the public was in my statement on February 8 before the Joint Committee on the Economic Report. I do not think the reader of that statement will feel that I selected facts to serve a purpose instead of setting forth and carefully discussing all of the relevant facts.

I admitted then, as I do now, that prices are moving in both directions; and I still feel that the stabilization program would be highly useful. I expect to make another comprehensive statement at hearings shortly, and until then I submit my last comprehensive statement as sufficient evidence to the reader that I try to look at all of the facts candidly and not to obscure any of them.

I am glad to note that The Washington Post agrees also as to the desirability of focusing attention through impartial authorized inquiry upon the problem of whether basic shortages may interfere with sustained maximum employment and production in the years ahead. I assure you there is no evidence that I have "prejudged" the issue in any particular area.

YOUR editorial says that you are left "speechless" by my thesis that production "should not be limited by a confession of inability to find markets for what we can produce." May I point out to the reader that this quotation does not occur in my printed communication to you, but is drawn from my prepared statement of February 8, where the meaning is clear when read in context.

I then said, in some general introductory remarks to a more detailed treatment, that the Employment Act of 1946 "pledges our every effort to the realization of a sound idea as old as the history of economic thought; that there are no limits to human needs, and that the great blessing of ability to produce more goods should not be surrendered for want of ability to distribute these goods."

I certainly have never argued that any basic productive facilities should be increased at a time when the demand for the products turned out by these facilities is lower than what they can now produce and is falling. I have said that, where current demand in any particular field far exceeds the capacity of present facilities, and where future demand would even more greatly exceed available supply if we are reasonably successful with general policies to maintain maximum employment and production throughout the economy, we should not fail to expand any such facilities on the defeatist assumption that we can do nothing to prevent the economy from swinging downward to lower and lower general levels of employment and production, even as in the past, after the "postwar boom" is over.

In short, I have simply restated the fundamental purposes of the Employment Act, to seek to define needed levels of output for a maximum production economy and to seek policies which may help to achieve this, instead of bowing to the dismal forecast as a guide to national economic policy that "seven lean years will always follow seven fat years." I confidently believe that, when properly understood, most objective economists and The Washington Post would agree with this viewpoint and that it certifies for public attention one of the most vital problems confronting our economy in the framework of world affairs.

REGARDING some misquotation in an excellent newspaper, other than The Washington Post, my views on wage policy have been set forth in several available documents and would be subscribed to by many economists. I have stated that the cost of living index is not a primary permanent guide to wage policy, because then real wages would remain constant so long as the cost of living remained stable, standards of living would not move upward in the long run, and genuine economic growth would be retarded.

Of course, wage increases out of line with productivity are in general undesirable. The aggregate of wages should be increased in the situation when objective analysis indicates that the portion of consumer income earned by wage earners is not high enough to play its appropriate role in helping to sustain maximum employment and production. I have frequently stated that the aggregate of wages would be too high—and might prove either inflationary or deflationary—in a situation where they were above the level required for this purpose.

Individuals may differ as to which of the two situations predominates at a given time. In the period of adjustment through which we are now going I have said that, wherever feasible, businessmen should temporarily squeeze profit margins by adjusting prices downward rather than resort first to cutbacks in production, layoffs of personnel, or wage reductions, because the latter course is more dangerous. Many businessmen agree with this advice, and are trying their best to follow it. Herbert Hoover gave the same advice when our economy was much worse off than it is today, but unfortunately business did not listen to him.

Fight to Revise Rankin Bill Opens Today

By Robert C. Albright

Post Reporter

A fight to modify the multi-billion dollar Rankin veterans pension bill, if an attempt to kill it fails, will be launched in the House today with reputed Administration backing.

The greatly modified version will be offered by Representative Walter B. Huber (Ohio), third ranking Democrat on the House Veterans committee, in the form of a complete substitute for the Rankin bill.

Huber's substitute would pay $90-a-month pensions at age 65 only to those honorably discharged veterans of World War I who can show need. The Rankin bill would pay the pension to all veterans of both World Wars, regardless of need.

Rayburn Takes Part

House Democratic leaders conferred with Huber late yesterday in the office of Speaker Sam Rayburn but declined to disclose in advance what their floor strategy will be.

Opponents of the measure may first try to kill it by a motion to strike out the enacting clause. Reports spread that this motion may come from the GOP side of the aisle.

Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (Mass.), told newsmen, however, that House Republicans have taken no party policy position and will vote individually on the measure.

Cheaper, Backer Says

Heading up the opposition, Huber charged the Rankin bill was "railroaded" through the House Veterans' Committee. He said he could not estimate the cost of his substitute but it would be "far less" than Rankin's.

Budget Bureau officials have figured the cost of the Rankin bill at around 125 billion dollars over the next 50 years.

Huber said most veterans of World War II do not want the pension. He quoted Amvets as labeling it "political demagoguery and a raid on the Treasury," and said the American Veterans Committee has opposed it from the start.

Huber said only the "top brass and not the rank and file" of the American Legion favor it.

He claimed VFW backing for his own substitute and predicted the Rankin bill "will never be approved as it stands."

Representative John Rankin (D., Miss.) meanwhile took the floor to announce plans for calling up his bill today. Rankin renewed his attack on The Washington Post, repeating his previous criticism of its editorial policy and blaming Eugene Meyer for the "Hoover depression."

Democratic leaders called the House into session an hour early (at 11 a. m.) to consider the bill and voiced hope the House will dispose of it before nightfall.

An attempt will be made to limit general debate to two hours by unanimous consent. The bill will be considered under an almost-forgotten 1880 rule giving general pension bills right of way.

Members generally reported that their mail was running "light" on the issue and that they were getting little or no pressure from World War II veterans "back home."

Crop Acreage Is Cut Down as Prices Decline

Lower prices for farm products have led farmers to cut down their plantings for this spring, the March survey of the Crop Reporting Board indicated yesterday.

Total acreages in crops, however, will be only slightly below last year. Fall-planted crops, seeded before the worst break in prices, exceeded last year by about the same acreage as farmers indicate they will reduce their spring plantings.

The report also indicated that even in the face of the spring reduction, the country may harvest another bumper crop—maybe another record—again this year.

Fields in Excellent Shape

In fact, the report states, part of the reduction in acreage this spring will be due to the excellent condition the fall-planted fields are in. Usually some of the fall-sown acreage has to be replanted in the spring; this year this reseeding operation is not necessary.

The department estimated that about 361 million acres may be planted to all crops this year. This is only 1½ million acres less than last year when the biggest total harvest in history was gathered.

The acreage planned to go into spring wheat was reported at 20 million or 3.6 per cent above a year ago. Added to the fall wheat plantings the total is almost 82 million acres, 5 per cent or about 4 million acres above last year.

Other crops that show acreage increases over a year ago are dry peas and tobacco. But marked declines were predicted for feed grains, corn, oats, barley, grain sorghums, in which all-time records were set last year.

Snow Mostly Gone

Declines also were reported in the oilseeds soybeans, flaxseed and peanuts—and most other crops that are planted—and plowed—in rows.

The report brought one piece of welcome information: "Snow has mostly disappeared, except in North Dakota and the mountain areas. The melting was so gradual that run-off was limited, as soils absorbed the moisture.

"Irrigation water supplies are improved in all States, and are above average in most districts. Some areas report the best prospective water supply ever recorded."

This was an answer to the scare predictions of a few weeks ago that the widespread snows would bring disastrous floods.

Locally, the report stated, the acreage of southern Maryland tobacco will be about 48,000, compared with 47,000 last year.

House Group Ends Hearing On Labor Bill

By The Associated Press

House hearings on Taft-Hartley Act repeal ended last night with a group of CIO left-wing unions shouting in vain to be heard.

All day long, a parade of CIO leaders slugged hard at the Taft-Hartley law. They indorsed President Truman's labor bill. They promised to comply with the 30-day cooling-off period provided in that bill to handle national emergency strikes. The AFL had already given similar assurance.

At twilight Representative A. B. Kelley (D., Pa.) banged his gavel signaling the completion of the 10 days of testimony. Then came the blow-up.

A number of CIO union officials who had not been heard came up and quietly offered their statements to be inserted in the record.

Demands Ignored

But spokesmen for the Fur Workers, Food & Tobacco Workers, United Electrical Workers, Longshoremen, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, American Communications Association, and Office & Professional Workers loudly demanded that the hearings be extended into the night so they could testfy.

In general, these unions urge repeal of Taft-Hartlty but they don't agree with the CIO and AFL in supporting the Truman labor bill. That bill would replace Taft-Hartley with a new law based on the Wagner Act of 1935-47, but with certain additions proposed by Mr. Truman.

Kelley replied heatedly to the protesting spokesmen: "Don't blame us. We had an understanding with the CIO that all CIO testimony would be completed in one day. Check with the CIO. We have 175 requests. If we open up these hearings——"

He cut off several of the union men in the midst of a sentence by crashring the gavel down hard.

Close of the hearings put the big battle over the Taft-Hartley Act one step nearer a showdown.

The Senate Labor Committee, in a report signed by all eight Democrat members, formally laid the bill before the Senate for debate.

In the final day of House hearings, CIO leaders kept Taft-Hartley under heavy fire.

CIO Secretary-Treasurer James S. Carey said the present law is an attempt to "sovietize American unions" by regulating them. He said Taft-Hartley gives "aid and comfort" to Communists everywhere.

Menawhile Harold W. Story, vice president of Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., told a news conference Taft-Hartley should be continued while a study is undertaken to develop a "sound national labor relations policy."

He suggested that the task of developing such a policy should be given to the Hoover Commission on Reorganization of Government, or some similar organization.

Debate to Begin Soon

The Senate committee, in a report signed by all eight Democrat members, challenged Congress to repeal the law and thereby prove that it believes in "the principles of our democratic society" and won't "continue to give merely lip service" to those principles.

A long and loud Senate debate will begin soon, maybe in three or four weeks. A shorter debate will come in the House—date uncertain. In these debates, Republicans and many Southern Democrats will fight to make the bill resemble Taft-Hartley more and Wagner less.

The five Republican Senators of the Senate committee shunned the majority report. They will file their own views.

The report said the Taft-Hartley Law violates democratic principles, which require "a minimum of Government interference and coercion."

It also said the T-H Act limits collective bargaining, encourages "individual bargaining," undermines living standards, and furnishes "means by which effective trade-union organization can be defeated."

At the other end of the Capitol, while a parade of CIO witnesses endorsed the Truman bill before the House Labor Committee, Henry Wallace's Progressive Party sent the committee a statement taking a different view.

Representative Marcantonio (American Labor Party-N. Y.) submitted the Progressive Party statement. He said the Progressives want Taft-Hartley repeal but oppose the Administration bill because it contains "undesirable" amendments to the Wagner Act.

Five Locals Act

Miners Call For Benefits In Walkout

Pittsburgh, March 21 (AP).—A demand that anthracite operators guarantee idle miners unemployment compensation today echoed through the Eastern Pennsylvania hard coal fields.

Five locals of the United Mine Workers in the Scranton area, representing 3,550 diggers, asked their union scale committee to insert in the next contract a clause guaranteeing $25 a week for idle miners.

The locals adopted a resolution, as the Nation's hard and soft coal shutdown began its second week, which said operators should make the payments "out of their own finances when they deprive us of receiving the $25 unemployment compensation to which we are rightfully entitled."

Pennsylvania pays its jobless a maximum of $20 a week for 24 weeks. The State's 100,000 soft coal miners and 75,000 hard coal miners are not receiving any payments in the current work stoppage. A State official said unemployed workers must be jobless through no action of their own.

With the 463,000 miners idle in mines east of the Mississippi in UMW President John L. Lewis' memorial-protest shutdown, attention also centered on Washington where the Senate is expected to act soon on confirming or rejecting the appointment of Dr. James Boyd as director of the Bureau of Mines.

69,000 Idle on Railroads

That appointment was one of the two reasons Lewis gave for ordering his men out of the pits March 14. The other was to pay tribute to killed and injured miners.

The shutdown has forced coal-carrying railroads to furlough more than 69,000 employes for the duration of the work stoppage. One large Pennsylvania steel mill has announced a production cutback.

In Harrisburg, the State Department of Public Assistance declared the mine shutdown is contributng to the "uncertainty of Pennsylvania's future employment outlook."

In a development related to a 1948 coal mine work stoppage, Lewis told a Court of Appeals in Washington that the Government had failed to prove he called the walkout. Lewis seeks to recover $1,420.000 in fines levied on the union and on him for contempt of court.

The court had found Lewis and his union guilty of contempt of a return to work order issued by the court. The $1,400.000 fine against the union and the $20,000 fine against Lewis were double the fines imposed against both in the 1946 coal miners' work stoppage.

Insurance Agent Bill Rejected in Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., March 21 (AP).—The Maryland House Banking and Insurance Committee rejected today a bill which would have required insurance salesmen to spend more than one half of their business time on the job to get a license.

The measure, by Delegate Beckwith (D., Baltimore County), was aimed at part-time insurance salesmen.

Damage Suit Is Dismissed

A $50,000 damage suit filed in the United States District Court at Alexandria a year ago by a citizen of Palestine has been dismissed on the ground that Palestine was not then an independent "foreign state."

The suit, brought by Leo Klausner against Albert Levy, 108 W. Rosemont ave., Alexandria, grew out of the dissolution of a business in Berlin 20 years ago in which both men had an interest.

Klausner claimed the Alexandria Federal Court had jurisdiction over the case because of the diversity of citizenship of the parties involved Judge Albert V. Bryan disagreed, however, and in a memorandum released yesterday dismissed the suit for lack of jurisdiction.

Judge Bryan gave the following explanation for his ruling.

A foreigner bringing suit in a Federal Court in this country must be a citizen or subject of a state recognized by the United States Government. Palestine never was. It existed as a mandate of Great Britain from shortly after World War I until last year, when it became the state of Israel.

But at the same time, its inhabitants were citizens of Palestine, and so could not bring suits as British subjects, the judge said.

John W. Waller, whose Alexandria law firm is representing Klausner said he will refile the suit listing Klausner as a citizen of Israel, which has been recognized by the United States.

Press Liberty Bill Reported

Annapolis, Md., March 21 (AP).—The Senate Judiciary Committee voted 6 to 2 to report favorably a bill to restrict Maryland courts from formulating rules to abridge freedom of the press.

The committe held a hearing last week at which witnesses said Rule 904 of the Baltimore Supreme Bench shackles freedom of the press.

The rule restricts publication of certain formation about crime news, including any statement made by an accused person, any mention of his actions after arrest, or any mention of a previous criminal record.

In other Legislative action today, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill to allow judges to instruct juries in criminal cases to return verdicts of not guilty on grounds of insufficient evidence.

At present, judges are not allowed to instruct juries on questions of law, because the juries are judges of both the law and the fact. Maryland and Indiana are the only States in which juries are "judges of law."

If passed, the jury bill would have to be approved by a referendum next year. It would amend the State Constitution.

State sickness insurance would be provided under a bill introduced today. The sponsors said it would "lighten the burden which now falls on the unemployed worker."

Maximum benefits of $18 a week would be paid to employes too ill to go to work. Total maximum benefits of $364 would be authorized for workers making $1800 and over in a previous base wage period.

Payroll deductions of 1 per cent of an employe's salary, up to $3000, would help build up the fund. Companies would withhold these contributions from regular wages.

The measure was introduced by Delegates Robinson (D., Baltimore Fourth) and Baynes (D., Baltimore Sixth).

Bill for Slot Machines Opposed by Pumphrey

By a Post Reporter

Annapolis, March 21.—Delegate LeRoy Pumphrey (D., Prince Georges), majority leader of the Maryland House of Delegates, today expressed opposition to a bill which would legalize slot machines in Prince Georges County.

"I regard those machines as the most vicious form of all gambling," he said. "I am very much afraid that if the machines are legalized attempts will be made, as they have been elsewhere, to gain political control of the county."

Marylanders Ask State School Help

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., March 21.—Citizens and officials all over Maryland today pulled out the stops in demanding more state aid for counties hard-pressed to find the money to build new classrooms.

A throng estimated at more than 1000 jammed into the House of Delegates chamber and spilled out into the marble corridors of the State House to attend a public hearing on the subject.

Holding the spotlight as members of the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee listened to more than 40 speakers, were two bills introduced simultaneously in both Houses.

One would authorize a state bond issue of 30 million dollars to be loaned to the counties and the other would quadruple the state incentive fund. The latter was backed unanimously by the crowd.

As speaker after speaker, all of them representing organizations, took the floor, scant heed was paid to Governor Lane's weekend proposal that a credit pool of 50 million dollars in state bonds be established for use by the counties.

At the end of the two-hour hearing, Senator Harold L. Sothoron (D., Prince Georges), majority leader of the Senate, asked the assemblage how many would be in favor of increasing the State income and sales taxes from the present rate of 2 per cent to 2½ per cent.

Hands shot up all over the House

Some delegates interpreted the question from the key administration leader as "a tip-off." They said it may mean that despite his announced opposition to increased State aid for school construction, Governor Lane in the face of overwhelming demand will give the quadrupling proposal his blessing.

He may then advocate increasing either the income tax or the sales tax, or both, observers said, to provide the necessary funds.

Another speaker, Nathan R. Gilbert, president of the Montgomery County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, estimated that enrollment has increased 70 per cent in his county since 1940.

Pleading for more State funds to provide new schools, he observed: "It would take us a generation to do it alone."

Gerald Powers, representing the Prince Georges County Council of P-TA's, said 5000-6000 county students will soon be on double shifts. "This," he said, "does not fit in with our social and economic system."

Woman a Heroine

Helicopter Saves 4 in Plane Crash

Calderwood, Tenn., March 21 (U.P.).—A wartime B-17 pilot set a little helicopter down four times on a snow-covered, windswept mountain top today and each time brought out a survivor of an airplane crash.

Three men and a heroic 40-year-old woman had spent more than 60 hours exposed to intense cold and without food. Although injured, they came through in good shape

Their rescuer was J. N. Newcomb of Glendale, Calif.

Those rescued were Fred Hall Hall's wife, Pilot James Hardy, 23, and Orville Rich, 38. All were from Detroit.

The three men said Mrs. Hall's spirits and nursing care kept them going. They also praised a fifth member of the group Stephen Walker, who walked down the mountain and after a harrowing two-day trek, reached the outside world with word of their plight.

Hardy said that if it hadn't been for Mrs. Hall "we wouldn't have made it."

"Well, I had to keep my spirits up for the sake of the men," she said. "I covered them up, I changed their socks and put on their shoes. I carried water up a steep mountainside in an aluminum suitcase. That's the way I got these scratches."

Lincoln Park Group Backs J. R. Young

The Lincoln Park Citizens' Association last night indorsed the reappointment of John Russell Young as District Commissioner.

The association also passed motions indorsing the District Tuberculosis Association's request for a $150,000 appropriation from Congress in addition to its Health Department allowance.

In other action, the group requested the Public Parks and Planning Commission to fill in the following streets where tree roots had appeared above the ground:

Both sides of Tennessee ave. from A to B sts. ne.; south side of C st. from Tennessee to 14th st. ne.; east side of 13th st. from C to D sts. ne.; east side of 15th st. from C to D sts. ne., and South Carolina ave., between Kentucky ave. and 14th st. se.

The 35 members present paid tribute to John W. Barse, a 30-year member who is celebrating his ninety-sixth birthday this month. Barse is father of Chief Justice George P. Barse of Municipal Court.

Four Indicted By Fairfax Grand Jury

Four persons were indicted by the Fairfax County grand jury yesterday on the opening day of a new county Circuit Court term.

Those indicted were:

Donald M. McKinnon, 22, 207 C st. nw., charged with the $53 robbery of Sweeney's tourist camp near Fairfax Circle January 13. McKinnon pleaded guilty, and his case was referred to the probation officer.

Charles W. Foltz, 33-year-old plumber of Merrifield, Va., charged with the attempted rape of a 6-year-old girl January 26. He pleaded innocent.

Hilda M. Dickerson, 32, of Bailey's Crossroads, Va., charged with arson. She pleaded innocent to the accusation that she set fire four times February 8 to the apartment she rented in a tenant house.

Ottomas A. Harris, 29, RFD 3, Manassas, Va., charged with sodomy February 10. Police have not found Harris.

Fort Davis

Mrs. Edward B. Morris, 1915 Ridge pl. se., last night was elected president of the Fort Davis Citizens Association. Other officers elected at the meeting of 80 members at the Ryland Methodist Church, Branch ave. and S st. se., were Sebastian Riccobono, first vice president; John Mako, second vice president; Mrs. Homer R. Baker, secretary; and Mrs. James Baxter, treasurer.

Shepherd Park

The Shepherd Park Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution urging Congress to reconsider a 2 per cent sales tax here.

Meeting at the Shepherd Park School, 14th st. and Kalmia rd. nw., the association's resolution declared the group is opposed to any increase in District real estate taxes.

Capitol View

The Capitol View Civic Association last night commended the recent stand of the Conecticut Avenue Citizens Association in calling for a "better understanding and a feeling of brotherhood" between the races.

The group, which met at Richardson Elementary School, 53d and Blaine sts. ne., also heard Richard R. Atkinson, of the District Land Redevelopment Agency, call the proposed redevelopment of Marshall Heights a "benefit to the people rather than a detriment." The program is important, he said, because of the substandard type of building now in the area.

Interfederation Council

The Interfederation Council last night went on record in favor of the bill in Congress to give District Commissioners the right to decide on daylight saving time in the District, at its meeting at the Washington Engineers Club, 1325 K st. nw.

The group voted to request representatives of the four Washington daily newspapers to participate in a forum discussion of problems affecting Greater Washington at its next meeting.

Chevy Chase

After discussing the relative merits of John Russell Young and Thomas B. Morgan, jr., for District Commissioner, the Citizens' Association of Chevy Chase last night voted to indorse no one for the post.

The 41 members at the meeting in the Chevy Chase Community Center, Connecticut ave. and McKinley st. nw., voted to write a letter of appreciation to their fellow-member,, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, who resigned last week as head of the Board of Education after 21 years of service on the board.

One on the Aisle—

Belasco Project Locally Backed

By Richard L. Coe

TOMORROW NIGHT'S PUBLIC meeting to discuss the plan for bringing the Belasco Theater back to life has one facet that deserves strong emphasis.

It is being sponsored by residents of Washington who are interested in the theater, either professionally or as observers.

In endless talks with theatrical bigwigs in New York, I've found the criticism that perhaps Washington is not interested in having a theater; that if its residents really want to bring the living theater back they should "do" something about it. "Do" precisely what, the bigwigs have been pretty vague, but tomorrow night's meeting and its sponsors should certainly put our town on record as more than just interested.

The meeting will be held at 8:15 in the Natural History Building of the Smithsonian Institution, Constitution ave. and 10th st. nw.

Chief speaker will be Representative Emmanuel Celler (D., N. Y.), who has introduced a bill providing that the Treasury remodel and reconstruct the Belasco Theater and lease it "consistent with a reasonable profit to the lessee regardless of loss to the Government." Representative Celler has been in Congress since 1922 and can certainly be reckoned as a Washington resident of long, respectable standing.

The Celler bill is now before the House Committee on Public Works, chairmaned by Representative William M. Whittington (D., Miss.). One member of this committee, Representative John A. Blatnik (D. Minn.), will address the meeting. A veteran of the recent war, Representative Blatnik is expected to explain how a National Capital without the living theater strikes a man from the Midwest.

Another prominent Democrat will take part, Melvin C. Hildreth, chairman of the Democratic Central Committee of the District. Virtually a lifelong resident of the District and the Nation's No. 1 circus fan, Mel Hildreth knows the story of the Belasco—once the Lafayette Square Opera House—and tells it with a fondness his audience will relish.

Notable Residents

Chairman of the meeting will be Father Gilbert V. Hartke, director of Catholic University's speech and drama department. A leading figure in the Capital's ecclesiastical and theatrical circles for the past decade, Father Hartke is a man whose words and works command national respect.

Although New York and Chicago have their claims on her, Actress Frances Starr is another Washington resident of long standing on the list of rally sponsors. As the wife of the late Robert G. Donaldson, Miss Starr lived here some years as a private citizen and devoted her energies to the more playful ways of social living. Between her plays nowadays, "home" to Miss Starr is Kalorama rd., and while she'll probably be asked to speak about David Belasco, whose bright star she was for so many years, her true value tomorrow night lies in her role as this city's leading professional actress.

Mrs. Francis Biddle is on the panel, too, the wife of the former Attorney General, a playwright in her own right, who last year had the curious experience of having a play running in New York which couldn't find a stage in her home city.

Nelson B. Bell, who for so many years covered the theater for this newspaper, is another longtime resident whose name as sponsor should mean much to Capital residents and the New York theater circles.

Prominent socialites who've missed the theater's relaxing entertainment and cultural stimuli are on the list, among them Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Lawrence A. Baker, Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller and Mrs. Edgar Ansel Mowrer.

For the Future, Not the Past

The city's leading theatrical figures are all represented—Bess Davis Schreiner, of the Theater Guild; Evelyn Freyman, of the Olney Theater; Edward Mangum, of George Washington University's staff and players; Horton Foote and Vincent Donehue, of Productions, Incorporated; Owen Dodson, the poet-playwright of Howard University; Constance Albright Snow, the concert manager; Patrick Hayes, her charming rival in the music field; Mary Stewart French, the American National Theater and Academy board member resident in Washington.

Organizing the public meeting has been the Washington Art Center Association, of which Lawrence J. Heller is president and J. G. Frain the indefatigable executive secretary.

One thing I hope about tomorrow night's meeting is that it will confine itself to the immediate problem of reviving the theater in this city. The discrimination issue is a thing of the past. Both the playwrights and the actors have stated they will not work in the National Capital unless all Americans can see their work.

The position has been taken, it exists and it is up to the meeting not to reopen old wounds but to discuss how the situation as it is can be resolved. This is a chance to look at the present and the future, not the past.

Police Open War On Pyramid Clubs

the Bureau of Internal Revenue had started keeping track of winners and their winnings for March 15, 1950, reference.

But despite overwhelming official opinion the legality of pyramid clubs was still finally undetermined last night. No court had yet called them illegal. Thomas was scheduled for arraignment in District Court, probably Friday.

The grand jury held Thomas "was concerned as owner, agent and clerk, and in other ways, in managing, carrying on and promoting a lottery club referred to and called a pyramid club." It held that Thomas had violated Section 1501, Title 22 of the District Code.

This section reads in part:

"If any person shall within the District keep, set up, or promote, or be concerned as owner, agent, or clerk, or in any other manner, in managing, carrying on, promoting, or advertising, directly or indirectly . . . any lottery, or shall sell or transfer any chance, right, or interest, tangible or intangible in . . . in any lottery, . . . he shall be fined upon conviction of each said offense not more than $1000 or be imprisoned not more than three years, or both."

No Action in Nearby Area

Yesterday's grand jury action applied to District pyramid clubs and members alone.

In Prince Georges County, Md., State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie said he "had not looked into pyramid clubs and at this time no action against them is contemplated."

In Alexandria, Va., Commonwealth's Attorney Howard W. Smith, jr., said he had not asked police for an investigation, although he said he personally believes pyramid clubs are illegal and violate the State lottery laws.

In Montgomery County, Md., police reported they were swamped with calls requesting information on the legality of the clubs, but said they had received no instructions from County officials. State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson was reportedly studying the statutes.

In Fairfax County, Va., Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh B. Marsh reported he did not know whether the clubs were illegal. But Marsh said he had asked County police to make a complete investigation of how the clubs work, to what extent they are flourishing and how much money is passing hands.

In Arlington County, Va., Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker had this to say:

"If pyramids clubs continue at their present feverish pitch, we're going to have to do something about them. Personally, I'm inclined to think they are illegal."

In Washington, Blick was promising immediate action.

In addition to planting plainclothesmen in pyramids, the vice squad chief promised these other methods would be used to slow the clubs "down to a walk."

1. The names of persons soliciting new members will be collected and Blick will attempt to get warrants against them for conspiring to break the gambling laws.

2. If police officers can obtain or find pyramid charts, which show the status of pyramid club members, the names appearing on these charts will be presented to the United States Attorney for prosecution.

3. Blick will concentrate on persons who accept money after yesterday's indictment. Persons who are no longer members of the clubs will not be prosecuted, he said.

4. Removal of telephones from the homes of pyramid club members was described by Blick as another weapon in his arseanl.

Under the regulations of the telephone company, which have the effect of law according to the Federal Communications Commission, phone service may be discontinued if police present evidence the telephone is being used for illegal purposes.

Might Lose Phones

John M. Howard, general commercial manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., said yesterday "telephone service will not be furnished if any law enforcement agency, acting within its jurisdiction, advises (the company) that such service is being used or will be used in violation of law, or if the telephone company receives other evidence that such service is being so used."

At the office of the Quartermaster General of the Army, officers were preparing a memo cautioning soldiers not to join or remain in pyramid clubs. Other Government agencies were looking into the matter.

Radio Station WGAY in Silver Spring scheduled a panel discussion on the clubs Wednesday morning, led by Dr. Jesse W. Sproul, professor of abnormal psychology at the University of Maryland.

Public reaction, as evidenced from hundreds of telephone comments received by The Washington Post yesterday varied from defiant indignation to surrender.

One woman said she belonged to three pyramids and was not going to quit any of them.

Another woman, who said she had joined to help raise money for a friend's expected baby, said she would get out.

Other comments included:

"Pyramids must flounder, but prostitutes flourish in Washington."

"And I was going to get paid off tonight!"

Perry Guilty Of Assault

Aaron Perry, local middleweight boxer, was found guilty of assault and fined $25 by Judge George Neilson in Municipal Court yesterday.

Charges were brought by Edward S. Newman, 38, of 1012 Fifth st. nw., who accused the 23-year-old boxer of hitting him "many times, including some rabbit punches" during an argument over damages to an auto.

Nolle prossed were charges against Perry of destroying public property, a plate glass window.

Informants To Be Shielded By Laughlin

James J. Laughlin, Washington lawyer who promised to make public the names of persons who know about alleged gambling in Prince Georges County, changed his mind yesterday.

Laughlin said he had consulted with "quite a number" of the persons and they had asked him not to disclose their names. He said he agreed with their contention they might be "intimidated" if their names were made public.

Laughlin and his client, Mrs. Anna T. Keleher, have accepted State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie's invitation to tell a Prince Georges County grand jury April 8 about gambling conditions, particularly in Mount Rainier.

Mrs. Keleher has charged that her estranged husband, once-convicted gambler John B. Keleher, conducted extensive horse-betting operations through last year in Mount Rainier, with the knowledge of county police.

In taking up Bowie's invitation, Laughlin wrote the State's Attorney that he woud present to the grand jury "correspondence" from many persons "offering to assist" in the investigation. Bowie, in turn, asked Laughlin for names and addresses that he might secure their appearance before the grand jury.

Kinnier Will Explain Arlington Zoning Plan

C. L. Kinnier, Arlington planning engineer, will explain the county's master zoning plan and procedure at a meeting of the Jefferson Civic League at 8 o'clock tonight at the fire house on S. 23d st. near Jefferson Davis hwy. in Arlington. A proposed recreation area for Aurora Hills will also be discussed at the meeting.

Tree-Planting Drive Opens in Falls Church

A program to put a flowering tree in every Falls Church front yard is blooming in the nearby Virginia city.

The drive was launched three weeks ago by the Falls Church Women's Club, which is urging residents to plant crabapple or pink dogwood trees to beautify the city.

To date, the club reported yesterday, more than 220 trees have been sold through an arrangement with a local tree nursery.

Under the plan, the club buys the trees at wholesale—$2.59 for one crabapple, about $3.50 for a dogwood tree—and sells them at the same rate to homeowners.

Residents are being contacted personally by some of the club's 52 members, or by phone.

To plug its tree-planting idea, the club is sponsoring a poster contest in Falls Church schools publicizing the drive. Best poster designers will be awarded water color sets at the Madison School at 9:45 a. m. today.

Barkley Talks Thursday At Brotherhood Fete

Vice President Alben T. Barkley will be the principal speaker at the Brotherhood Week dinner of the National Conference of Christians and Jews Thursday, March 24, at 7 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel.

Justice William O. Douglas of the United States Supreme Court will preside at the affair, which will climax the week's observances.

Ruling Ends Arlington Car Tag Confusion

Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg yesterday turned over "complete operation" of the sale of the county's new auto license tags to Treasurer John Locke Green.

The move ended six days of confusion regarding who should sell the tags. Treasurer Green last Wednesday said the function fell to his office, which is not under the county manager.

But county officials declared the act setting up the tag sale gave control to the county board, and thus put administration under Lundberg.

Lundberg's action followed a report from the Commonwealth's Attorney, who said the tag office employes should operate under Green, with all other functions being handled by the county.

Green said last week he thought he could save the county about $8000 yearly in operating the tag sale. A total of $14,025 had been provided by the county board for the purpose.

National Dairy Net Increases To $25,358,54

By S. Oliver Goodman

National Dairy Products Corp., which operates extensively in the Washington area, yesterday reported net earnings of $25,358,546 or $4.03 a common share for 1948.

Van Bomel

This compared with $23,159,391 or $3.68 a share in 1947 according to President L. A. Van Bomel.

Last year's sales reached a record high of $986,404,000, compared with $897,324,000 in 1947. Van Bomel pointed out that in both 1948 and 1947 earnings represented 2.6 cents of each sales dollar, but in 1946 it was 3.4 cents.

"The general upward spiral in most costs and prices has reached its peak at last," Van Bomel declared in the annual statement to stockholders. "Any additional relief which might take place in costs would be welcomed by the company as an opportunity to further reduce prices, thus stimulating sale of our products.

"Prices have been too high," he continued, "and we are quite happy that they are coming down."

Costs and expenses last year totaled an all-time high of $963,511,000, compared with $876,603,000 in 1947. Inventories at the end of 1948 totaled $89,712,000, compared with $88,168,000 the year before.

National Dairy Products Corp., a Nation-wide organization, is the parent firm of Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy Co. in Washington and Southern Dairies, Inc., whose home offices are in this city.

PEPCO OWNERSHIP: Latest report as of March 7 shows 5839 holders of Potomac Electric Power Co. common stock in the District of Columbia, a gain of 158 over December 3, 1948, and an increase of 2249 over December 31, 1947. Including Virginia and Maryland, there were 8709 shareholders here compared with 8304 on December 3 and 5338 on December 31, 1947. Of the 2,981,250 shares of common outstanding, about 43 per cent now is owned in Washington and two nearby States, according to the compilation by R. Roy Dunn, vice president and treasurer of Pepco.

EARNINGS: Pan American Airways Corp. reported net income of $4,590,000 for 1948, compared with $2,960,000 for 1947. Other earnings statements:

New York Cotton

New York, March 21 (AP).—Cotton futures moved in a narrow range today, and closed 40 cents a bale lower to 5 cents higher compared with the previous close.

Traders held to the sidelines, partly reflecting in-between season influences. Not enough is known of new crop planting intentions to influence the futures market materially, dealers said.

PUC Postpones Pepco Hearing Until Wednesday

The Potomac Eelectric Power Co. yesterday secured a postponement to Wednesday at 10 a. m. of a Public Utilities Commission hearing on its proposal to sell a 37-million-dollar bond issue.

The postponement was granted by the PUC after J. F. Reilly, Pepco counsel, said that after 4 p. m. last Friday, "the company was apprised of some matters which it would like to have time to study and consider before presenting evidence in support of its application."

The company wants to sell 3¼ per cent debentures, maturing in 20 years, to three insurance firms without competitive bidding.

Expected to intervene are Halsey, Stuart & Co. of Chicago and Otis and Co. of Cleveland. They were represented at yesterday's brief session by Joseph L. Weiner, an attorney.

Home Beneficial Ends 50th Year

Home Beneficial Life Insurance Co., Inc., of Richmond, Va., yesterday reported $344,401,945 of life insurance in force and assets of $46,267,203. The company completed a half century of service in February. W. E. Wiltshire is president.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 21 (AP).—Grains slid downward under the leadership of wheat today as the first full day of spring emphasized in traders' minds the relatively favorable crop outlook for the present year.

Wheat fell as much as 3 cents at one time, the May delivery leading the retreat. New crop contracts also backed down, all selling within 10 cents of the extreme low made in the February price break. Corn and oats also lost ground, but deferred oats contracts held fairly steady.

Soybeans and lard joined the general downswing, beans tumbling more than 9 cents. All lard deliveries ended below $12 a hundred pounds.

Wheat finished 2 to 2⅞ lower, corn was ⅛-1¼ lower, oats were ⅛ lower to ⅛ higher, soybeans were 2¾-3¼ lower, and lard was 7 to 20 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Selling in May wheat was influenced by action of the Kansas City Commodity Credit Corporation. It twice lowered its bid for cash wheat, and in addition, restricted purchases to 50,000 bushels from any one source. The final bid was 38 cents over the May future at Kansas City, down 2 cents from last weekend.

Motor Dealer, Wife Indicted In Mail Fraud

A Washington man and wife were indicted yesterday on mail fraud charges in connection with advertising for youth camps and for a lightweight automobile of radical design.

Indicted by the District grand jury were Mr. and Mrs. Bryson deHass McCloskey of 1316 L st. nw., where they operated the Publix Motor Car Co.

According to the indictment, the couple widely advertised the automobile and fraudulently advertised exclusive franchises to be purchased for $500 each. The grand jury found that the defendants lacked the right to give out the franchises.

The youth camps were under the sponsorship of "Youth of America" operated by the McCloskeys, it was charged. The camps were advertised as "Junior West Points." Form letters intercepted by postal authorities contained prominent names as alleged sponsors. Included were Faith Baldwin, Harlan J. Bushfield, Ralph L. Carr, Irvin S. Cobb, James A. Farley, Geraldine Farrar, Jimmy Fidler, the Right Rev. Msgr. William A. Gilfillan, Norman Rockwell, Rockwell Kent and Francis P. Murphy.

College and Officer Indicted

The Northwestern College, 637 M st. nw., and one of its officers aslo were indicted on mail fraud charges.

It was charged the college and Davis W. Board, 37, one of its officials, made false representations to prospective students as to its charter, educational qualifications and academic degree conferred.

Postal authorities began investigating the outfit after advertisements appeared in Negro newspapers telling readers that home study courses at Northwestern College here would result in degrees for religion, business, music and philosophy.

According to court papers, several small classrooms and a piano were found at the school, which was incorporated and held graduation ceremonies in Maryland.

Named in Fatal Stabbing

In another indictment, Miss Mary H. Wrenn, 37, of 1017 Browning pl. ne., was charged with second-degree murder in the fatal butcher-knife stabbing of her sister, Mrs. Oaddie Taylor, 46, on February 13.

The grand jury ignored a charge of illegal possession of a marijuana cigarette against Joseph A. Wagstaff, 5506 Grove st., Chevy Chase, Md. Wagstaff had denied knowledge that the cigarette was in his possession.

Export Controls to End On Petroleum Products

The Commerce Department said yesterday quota limits on exports of motor and aviation gasoline, heating oil and kerosene will be lifted April 1.

This easing of controls "reflects an improvement in the supply-demand situation, and is in line with the policy of relaxing export controls as the need for them decreases," the department said.

Schools Association To Hear Dr. Strayer

Dr. George D. Strayer, author of the 2000-page report on District schools, will discuss his survey and answer questions at a meeting of the District of Columbia Public Schools Association Thursday at 8 p. m. in the board room of the District Building, 14th and E sts. nw. The meeting will be open to the public.

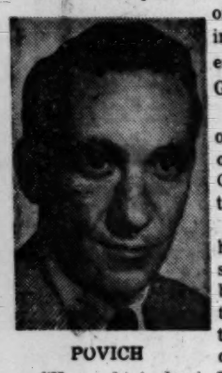
This Morning

With Shirley Povich

WINTER GARDEN, Fla., Mar. 21.—There's a new optimism in the Washington training camp and it stems from the bat of Gilbert Fitzgerald Coan of Monroe, N. C. He's erasing the memory of Gil Coan, the two-year flop.

This is the year when Coan will justify the high promise he offered when he came out of Chattanooga in 1945 leading the Southern League in everything except old sweatshirts, Clark Griffith feels.



POVICH

For a variety of reasons, Griffith is high on the 24-year-old outfielder for whom he once rejected an offer of $100,000 from the Giants. Chief among them is Coan's hitting splurge this spring.

In the Nats' opening game, Coan went hitless. Since then, he has been something special, and at the end of six games he's batting a neat and gaudy .500, with 11 hits to show for his 22 times at bat. In five of the six games he has beaten out at least one bunt.

"He ought to bunt .300 this season," says Joe Engel, the man who first detected signs of talent in Coan and farmed him out to Kingsport, Tenn., where he hit .367 in 1944.

WHEN COAN REPORTED to Engel originally, he said he was a second baseman. "I moved him into the outfield for his own good health," said Engel, "because he was sure to get killed around the infield. Whoever told him he was a second baseman was plotting against his life."

In 1945, Coan was the hottest thing in the minor leagues with Chattanooga. He led the Southern Association in hitting (.372), two-baggers (40), triples (28) and stolen bases (37). He won every sprint race staged during the season. Twice he scored from second on infield outs, once he scored from first base on a single.

Griffith was drooling at the prospect of getting such a guy up with the Nats. He brought Coan up in 1946, and promptly lost respect for Southern Association baseball. Coan couldn't field, didn't have much of an arm, didn't know how to get a lead off base, and in 59 games with Washington batted a discouraging .209.

BACK TO CHATTANOOGA he went in 1947, and in the Southern Association he was a ball of fire all over again with a .340 average, so the Nats brought him up again last spring. He got off to a bad start, burned up ethyl chloride while his ankle was being treated, and never did untract himself. He wound up last season hitting .232 for the Nats.

By this time, Engel couldn't understand it. "Coan's the most baffling case I ever knew in 35 years of scouting," said Engel. "What does a scout look for? He likes a fellow who can throw, who can run, who has power and who wants to learn. Coan has all of these things. If I had to scout him all over again and the price tag was $100,000, I'd still buy him and feel I did the right thing."

Coan's eagerness to learn was, paradoxically, a handicap, Engel declared. "With Chattanooga, we just let him go out and do the best he could and that was the best in our league," said Engel. I suspect too many people tampered with him when he got to Washington. I hope they've learned this lesson."

NOBODY IS TAMPERING with Coan at this time. The Washington bosses are perfectly content to let him walk up to the plate and continue hitting .500, like he is doing. When he isn't bunting, Coan is no humpty-dumpty hitter, either. He's the only man in the American League who put the ball over Griffith Stadium's right field fence four times last season.

They're playing him in center field now, and that's a compliment to his improved outfielding. He still breaks in the wrong direction sometimes, but that wondrous speed permits him to remedy his original errors in judgment, and he likes center field the best.

"It's the easiest field to play, you see the ball better," says Coan. "Everything hit to right or left is apt to be twisting or slicing, but in center they come at you nice. "Somebody said he was a guess hitter up at the plate." "That's right," admitted Coan, "we all guess and the man who says he doesn't is a bare-faced liar."

My Story . . . By Joe Louis

"I Educated My Hands in Trade School"

BEFORE I get to tell how we came to move north to Detroit when I was 12 years old, there's one other thing: in all those years in Alabama I never knew anything about race or anything like that. No one talked about it, as I can remember. If there was lynch talk, it never got to me or my folks. Not like now. I never got to know about such things until we got to Detroit. In Alabama I played with the Langley twins and other white kids, and we had no color talk. I knew they had things I didn't have, but I took that natural. I never hooked it in with race difference. I think I would have remembered if I had.

People always ask was I a fighter when I was a kid, I didn't fight much; less than my brother Lonnie, maybe less than most other kids, because I kind of kept more to myself. My mother says I didn't fight. I laughed things off. I got a memory of a kid fight when we lived in Camp Hill. I fought some other boy, but I don't remember why and his name don't come to me. Teacher saw it from the school window.

SHE WHIPPED me for it, but she didn't whip him. I guess that gave him the decision. I had little scraps like that but nothing to make anyone say, "Joe Louis will be champion some day." No sign of that. I never dreamed it, but like I said I don't dream things.

I was 12 years old when Pat Brooks heard about the money Ford was paying. He went up first, and then brought us up to Detroit. We moved in with some of our kin on Macomb street. It was kind of crowded there, but the house had toilets indoors and electric lights. Down in Alabama we had outhouses and kerosene lamps. My stepfather got a job with Ford and we got a place of our own in a frame tenement on Catherine street. I went to Duffield School but I couldn't take to learning any better there than I did in Mount Sinai. I couldn't hardly get past the sixth grade. I didn't like it because I was bigger than any other kid in my class. Vunies caught up with me and passed me. She's the smart one in our family.

I EARNED a buck now and then after school, on an ice-delivery truck. I worked for an ice company with Freddy Guinyard. He'd stay downstairs minding the horse and I toted 50 or 75 pounds of ice up a couple of flights. I didn't mind hard work. I think it helped me for fighting. I think it built me up. I made some money delivering groceries, too. All this money went into the house. We needed it. Up North we didn't eat as good as we did in Alabama. Stuff cost so much.

Nights I hung out on the corner with the Catherine street gang. We had fights, but nothing much; just gang fights the way kids do. You got into a fight and you just punched the best you could. I had no haymaker then, no more than any other East Side kid. I wasn't doing so good in Duffield School, so they sent me to Bronson Trade School. That was Miss Vada Schwader's idea. She was one of the teachers. She figured I better educate my hands than my head.

It worked out I did cabinetmaker's work at Bronson; made nice things. I made little tables and shelves and knickknack closets. I was pretty good at it. When I had them finished off I brought them home to be used in the house.

JOE LOUIS AND JACK DEMPSEY
(Dempsey an early inspiration to Joe)

WE DIDN'T HAVE MUCH furniture and it was hard to get. My stepfather was let out at Ford's because the depression had come. My mother had to go down to the relief place and wait in line to get us a few bucks a week. We kept track of what we got and I paid it all back—$70 it was— when I got $1300 for beating Charlie Massera in 1934.

When I got to be almost 17 my mother fixed for me to take violin lessons from a teacher down on Warren and Woodward. She thought I might be good at it, but I only took five or six lessons. I never got to play the whole scale. A violin felt small in my hands.

What happened was I really got interested in boxing. I put on the gloves with other kids in Bronson School gym. I thought I might get to fight in the Golden Gloves and be somebody. We'd stand around on the corner, nights, and talk about the big purses fighters got.

Thurston McKinney, who was a few classes ahead of me in Bronson, said there was no real money in fiddling. He talked up what fighters like Kid Chocolate and Jack Dempsey made. He showed me in Ring Magazine where they made more in one fight than a fiddler made all his life. He worked on me like that and the idea of big money kind of swelled in my head.

THURSTON SAW me put a Mexican boy away with one left hook down in the school gym one day. He said I had stuff and I ought to go in training for a fighter. He kept at me. He said, "You got to have education to be a good one on the violin. You got to read notes." He had another good argument. He said if I started fighting right off I could get from $7 to $25 in merchandise checks even as amateur, but it would be years before I would get in a band and earn money with a violin. That made sense. Even $7 to $25 sounds like big money when you got none.

I figured Thurston wasn't just talking. He was getting merchandise checks for prizes in the amateurs. Before I really got started Thurston was lightweight amateur champion of Michigan. Now he works in Sunnie Wilson's. That's a bowling alley and restaurant owned by Negroes in Detroit. Thurston was a good fighter. He didn't get the breaks like I did.

BUT HE WAS the one got me started. I skipped my violin lessons. I used the money to pay my amateur dues. I would start out from home with the violin, but I would hide it in the locker down in Brewster Recreation Center and I would put on the gloves with other kids. Atler Ellis was my first trainer there. He taught me a lot. The only thing was I couldn't give full time to it. I got a job in the Briggs factory for $25 a week. I pushed truck bodies to the sprayer on the assembly line. The tape would come off the bodycovers and land on the floor, sticky side up. The tape would gum onto the dolly wheels, and you'd get a real workout pushing those truck bodies. I would leave the factory around 5 o'clock, go home for dinner and then go over to the gym.

Baseball Answers Jumpers' Suit Today

New York, March 21 (AP).—Organized baseball, which for many years avoided court tests as to the legality of its player contracts, must come into court tomorrow to give its reasons why Max Lanier and Fred Martin should not be reinstated immediately.

Lanier and Martin, former St. Louis Cardinals who were suspended for jumping to the Mexican League, applied for a temporary injunction against baseball, charging that it is a monopoly and is operated in violation of the antitrust laws.

At a hearing last week before Federal Judge Edward A. Conger, the defendants were given until tomorrow to file briefs in reply to a show cause order seeking reinstatement for the players. A similar hearing in behalf of Danny Gardella, former New York Giants outfielder, is to be held Wednesday morning.

Judge Conger, a baseball fan, has indicated that he will give a decision within 24 hours after the case is completed.

Even if the application for a temporary injunction, which in effect would lift the suspensions, is denied, baseball still would have to contend with the $2,500,000 damage suits filed by Lanier and Martin and Gardella's $300,000 suit which charge that the five-year suspensions deprived the players of their chance to earn a livelihood.

Named as defendants in the Gardella suit were the Giants, Commissioner A. B. Chandler, Ford Frick, president of the National League; William Harridge, president of the American League, and George M. Trautman, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues. The two former Cardinals also added the 15 other major league clubs to the list of defendants.

Lanier and Martin, besides asking reinstatement, have asked that the defendants be restrained from refusing to negotiate with them for their services and from demanding that they sign any contract containing a reserve or termination clause.

The challenge to the legality of the standard baseball contract is based largely upon the reserve clause, which forbids a player to deal with any club other than the one with which he previously had played.

In his argument last week, Mark F. Hughes, attorney representing the major league clubs, contended that any restraining order would immediately restore the players to the active list and the temporary injunction which was sought, would, in effect, provide permanent relief.

Danny Petro Kayoes Oliver In First Round

Danny Petro, Washington southpaw, proved himself fit and ready to fight Jimmy Cooper, his keen local rival, in an outdoor match this summer by knocking out DeWitt Oliver, San Antonio Tex., featherweight, in the first round of their feature eight-rounder last night at Turner's Arena.

A barrage of lefts and rights to the Texans' head and body finished him off in exactly 2:06 of a murderous opening heat.

Danny tore in shortly after the bell to floor Oliver with a smashing left to the solar plexus. Oliver fell a second time from another fusillade of punches, and a left to the body sent him down a third time—for keeps.

It was Petro's fourth straight knockout at Turner's this season—all in two rounds or less.

Petro weighed 127 and Oliver 126.

Art Llanos, 120, Puerto Rican bantamweight, threw too many punches for Lew Yonkers, 117, Roanoke, Va., and scored a technical knockout in 1:57 of the fifth round of their scheduled eight-rounder. A crashing right to the jaw sent Yonkers reeling to the canvas, and Referee Ray Bowen stopped the battle.

Jerry Kortright, 119, of New York, scored an eight-round unanimous decision over Johnny Arduini, 116½, Washington, for his second straight over the local boy. Kortright had Johnny on the deck several times during the bout.

Jesse Hagan, 144½, Washington, took the opening four from Al Harris, 147, Washington.

In one of the last fights of the night, Red Gaddis, 133½, of Washington, won a split eight-round decision from his District foe, Burt Wicks, 130.

Braves' Camp Cold To Orlando Report On Deal With Bobo

Bradenton, Fla., March 21 (AP). From Orlando comes word the much-traveled, now unemployed Bobo Newsom is maneuvering for an opportunity to bid for a job on the Boston Braves' pitching staff.

Bobo, veteran right-handed pitcher who has been with more clubs in organized baseball than any other player, insists the Giants "didn't give me a fair shake last season."

Reaction here was negative, a few grins, no words.

Fun-Loving Nats Tied, 1-1, By Lookouts

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Winter Garden, Fla., March 1.—The Nats, such as they were today, managed to preserve their two-game winning streak in the grapefruit league but couldn't lengthen it. They were battled to a 1-1 tie by their Chattanooga farm hands.

There wasn't a regular in the Nats' lineup but that is a flimsy excuse at best, because Chattanooga was also using its B team.

At the end of the ninth, the game was called for no more apparent reason than that nobody was taking it very seriously.

Most of the honors belonged to Chattanooga anyway. They outhit the Nats, 8 to 6, and came from behind to score the tying run in the eighth inning off Rookie Dick Welteroth.

Lou Bevil, who sometimes plays first base, sometimes third base, was playing second base today and he threw the game away for the Nats. After Dennis Brazil and Bill Cox singled in the eighth, Bevil took Joe Delcastro's grounder for a force play at second and then threw wild past first baseman Mark Christma to let the tying run score.

The Nats' lone run was something of a gift, too. Eddie Davis walked two in the second inning, and Sam Dente scored when Jay Difani busted a single to left field.

Buzz Dozier, rookie right hander, pitched the first four innings for the Nats and gave up no runs, despite four hits.

Catcher Len Okrie was virtually a batting terror today in the Nat lineup. He made two of their six hits.

The Washington regulars took a busman's holiday and watched the game in civilian clothes along with President Clark Griffith, who was not thrilled by the batting impotency of his rookies.

Earlier in the day the Nats took a long workout at their Orlando camp, and listened for an hour as Umpire Joe Paparella explained the new rule

Kentucky, Illinois Win Eastern NCAA Games

New York, March 21 (AP).—Kentucky's defending champions joined Illinois in the finals of the Eastern NCAA basketball eliminations tonight with a workmanlike 85-72 victory over Villanova.

Illinois shouldered its way into the last round under more trying circumstances, having to stage a stout rally in the final minutes to subdue a surprisingly frisky Yale University, 71-67.

The favored Kentucky five and Illinois, Western conference champion, will meet at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night for the Eastern crown. The victor then will take on Oklahoma A & M., the western titlist, in Seattle, Wash., next Saturday for the championship.

The Kentucky-Illinois game will start around 9:45 p.m. (EST) after a consolation joust between Yale and Villanova at 8 p.m.

The Kentuckians went out on the court still stinging from the upset defeat handed them by Loyola in the quarterfinals of the National Invitation Tournament here last week, and you could tell from their grim visages that these drawling Southern boys mean business tonight.

They were taut and taunted as the game got under way, and the score was tied three times until Alex Groza's tip-in gave them a 17-15 lead after 6½ minutes. Then the steamroller ground into high gear, however, and Villanova was beaten, thoroughly beaten, despite a fast, ever-pressing game. The Kentucky edge was 48-37 at halftime.

Paul Arizin, Villanova's leading offensive ace all year, scored 30 points just as did Alex Groza of Kentucky, before he left in the game's closing minutes with five personal fouls charged to his name.

Groza scored his whopping 30 points in an easy manner. And there's no telling how many more he would have scored had there been time. Jim Line, with a left-handed flip-shot that just wouldn't stay out of the basket, bucketed 21 and Clif Barker 18.

Sometimes futilely flailing, sometimes sharp, Villanova simply was no match for Kentucky—either in height, shooting ability or team polish.

Middlecoff Wins Open With 69-274

Jacksonville, Fla., March 21 (AP). Cary Middlecoff rolled down birdie road to the top $2000 prize in the Jacksonville Open Golf Tournament today.

He fired a 33-36—69—three under par—on his final 18-hole round for a 274 total. The victory here made him the top money winner of the year.

Jerry Barber, the little Los Angeles golf gloves salesman, steamed into second place at 276 and $1400 by stroking the best round of the four-day play—a 33-32—65.

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, the 39-year-old veteran from Albuquerque, N. Mex., took third money with 278. He finished with a 69.

Lloyd Mangrum, whom Middlecoff pushed out of the leading money position in 1949, shot an even par 72 over the 6282-yard course and was tied for fourth with Jim Turnesa of Briarcliff, N. Y. Both had 278. Turnesa's final round was a 71.

Lee Worsham of Washington, D. C. took down a $110 prize with his 286 which tied him for eighteenth place.

Browns Rally In 9th, Beat Indians, 4-3

Burbank, Calif., March 21 (AP).—Pinch Hitter Whitey Platt's ninth-inning single, with the bases loaded, sent two runs across the plate and gave the St. Louis Browns a 4-3 decision over the Cleveland Indians today.

The Browns had trailed the world champions since the first inning when an error, a hit batsman, Ken Keltner's single and Allie Clark's double produced two runs. Larry Doby singled and Lou Boudreau doubled in the third to end the Cleveland scoring.

Roy Sievers again starred for [illegible] driving in one run and scoring two others. Rookies Ken Wood and Jack Graham contributed doubles which led to runs.

Feerick, Seoldri Remove Casts, May Get Into BAA Playoffs

By Bill Ahlberg
Post Reporter

The Caps came up with a bit of good news yesterday.

It seems that the injured Bob Feerick and Freddie Scolari may yet see service in the forthcoming playoffs.

Feerick, who injured his knee against Minneapolis last Saturday night removed the cast yesterday. Scolari, who has been sporting a broken thumb, also decided he had been carrying the cast around too long and followed Bob in removing same.

Both will be in uniform but neither will be ready to go in the opening game against Philadelphia Wednesday, or even in the second game on Thursday.

But if a third game is necessary in the series—Saturday night could see both of the boys breaking into the lineup.

Feerick will begin exercising his leg tomorrow and Freddie will join him.

If the Caps can squeeze by Philadelphia both Feerick and Scolari feel that they'll be up to par for the rest of the playoff grind.

The news brought a terrific boost to the morale of the rest of the Caps.

"No team ever needed backcourt men as we do these two, and if they are available in any capacity I feel we may go all the way," Coach Red Auerbach said.

Meanwhile, in New York Cap officials were making news, too.

Auerbach headed the delegation which reached into the pile at the association's annual player draft and came up with Kentucky's great Wallace "Wah Wah" Jones and Jim Owens, of Baylor.

The Caps also picked Jim Lacy, Loyola of Baltimore's great scorer, Maynard Haitcock of George Wash-

Stanley Cup Pits Wings-Montreal, Bruins-Leafs

New York, March 21 (AP).—The Detroit Red Wings, champions of the National Hockey League, open their bid for the coveted Stanley Cup tomorrow night.

Coach Tommy Ivan's rollicking crew takes on the Montreal Canadiens in a best four-out-of-seven series in Detroit, while the Boston Bruins entertain the Toronto Maple Leafs in a similar semifinal round series.

Detroit will act as host for the first two games. The third and fourth games will be at Montreal. The fifth and seventh games, if necessary, will be at Detroit and the sixth at Montreal.

Boston also will be at home for its first two games with Toronto. The scene then will shift to Tornto for the third and fourth meetings. The fifth and seventh games, if necessary, will be at Boston and the sixth at Toronto.

Caps and Warriors Get Into B. A. A. Action at Philadelphia Wednesday

New York, March 21 (AP).—The Basketball Association of America opens the first of its playoff series tomorrow night in Rochester. The three other first-round best-of-three sets start Wednesday.

Rochester, which won the Western Division by one game over Minneapolis, will be host to St. Louis, fourth-place finisher in the West. The series will continue Wednesday night in St. Louis with the third game, if necessary, back at Rochester Saturday night.

In the other Western playoff set, Minneapolis entertains Chicago Wednesday night. The two clubs move to Chicago Thursday night and stay for Saturday's game if necessary.

Washington, the Eastern Division flag winner, opens at Philadelphia Wednesday night against the fourth-place Warriors. The second game will be in Washington Thursday night and the rubber match is also in Washington Saturday if they split the first two.

New York, which wound up six games back of Washington, also opens on the road, facing the Bullets at Baltimore Wednesday. They shift to New York Thursday and play here again Saturday if necessary.

American League Hockey Playoffs Under Way Today

New York, March 21 (AP).—The top three teams in the Eastern and Western Divisions of the American Hockey League will open the circuit's Calder Cup Playoffs Tuesday night.

Cleveland's Barons qualified for a Western playoff berth last night by trouncing the pennant-winning St. Louis Flyers, 7-3, while the runnerup Indianapolis Capitols knocked the Pittsburgh Hornets out of a berth by beating them, 2-1.

The Providence Reds, Eastern Division pennant winners, will entertain Western winner St. Louis Tuesday in the first game of their best four-out-of-seven series.

Indianapolis will take on the East's second-place Hershey Bears at Hershey in the first game of a best two-out-of-three series, while the Barons clash with the Springfield Indians in Springfield in the first game of another best two-out-of-three set.

Musial Thinks Spring Toughest

By Red Smith

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 21 (NYHT).—Stan Musial had slowly shucked his business clothes and was sitting relaxed in front of a locker in the Cardinal dressing room tastefully attired in an ensemble of skin. He sighed faintly.

Red Smith

"I wish the season would start," he said.

"Which is tougher?" he was asked. "Working in the spring or playing in August?"

"Playing in August is plenty tough when you're losing," Jim Russell said.

"Oh," Musial said. "This is toughest. When the season starts, you're in shape and then it's just routine."

Musial is always fit, though. He trains through the winter as conscientiously as he plays through the summer, which is probably one of the reasons why his name makes the headlines less often than many others. Trere isn't much room for dispute about his ranking in the game today. All things considered, he is the best ballplayer alive.

But the only way he ever makes news is by beating pitchers with sticks or robbing rivals of triples. There is nothing flamboyant about the guy. He doesn't swagger or get into fights or pop off or get himself jammed up. In the winter he keeps his weight down by limiting himself to two meals a day. When spring training starts and he begins eating a third meal, he gains a little weight which he wears off slowly during the season.

THUS HE CAME to camp this year weighing 175 pounds, exactly what he scaled when the 1948 season ended.

"Since then," he said, "I've put on about four pounds. A ballplayer's a terrible chump to get fat in the winter and then have to reduce violently in the spring. It's an awful strain on him physically. Must cost him a couple of years of play at least."

There was some idle talk about the baseball suits begun by Dany Gardella.

"Think the reserve clause will be tossed out?" Musial asked.

Nobody thought it would go that far. At least, the notion was that an arrangement could be made whereby the basic structure of the game would be preserved on a legal basis. If other highly competitive businesses could operate inside the law, it seemed idiotic to contend that baseball couldn't.

Musial nodded agreement.

"I think most ballplayers get a fair shake," a guy said. "Although of course there are some in every business who get the short end of the stick. Yet up to the last couple of years, when they put in that rule limiting salary cuts to 25 per cent, the club owners could have offered you $5000 and what could you do except take it?"

"Nothing, Musial said, "unless I wanted to quit making a living. There have been some pretty good concessions made the last couple years. Before that it was pretty tough on a player."

"You know why concessions were made?"

"Sure," Musial said. "It was when players started to organize a union. But isn't that always the way? If nobody ever got pushed around, there'd never be any unions."

AAU Boxing Card Lists 21 Bouts Tonight

Davis Faces Thomas in Third Round

Some of the hardest-hitting entries in the 1949 District of Columbia AAU boxing tournament will get into action tonight as the quarterfinal round is staged at Turner's Arena at 8:30.

A total of 21 bouts are on the schedule, listing novices as well as seniors. In the more experienced division a standout bout is expected to be the meeting of Willie Davis, last year's novice lightweight champion who has moved up, and Pat Thomas.

In the light-heavyweight class hostilities wil be featured by Ralps Meador, who goes against Hezekiah Williams, and Johnny Shields who meets Merrick's Phil Taylor.

Some of the other big stars were drawn like this:

The Boston Celtics got rights to Tony Lavelli of Yale, Indianapolis took Kentucky's Alex Groza, the St. Louis Bombers drafted Ed MacCauley of St. Louis University, and the Chicago Stags picked Ralph Beard of Kentucky. All were named on all-America teams.

The Caps are to be guests of honor at a luncheon for the press and radio at the Atlas Club today at 1 p. m., and will be given a royal sendoff.

In the playoffs Washington's toughest job, as usual, will be that of stopping Joe Fulks.

Fulks has scored 402 points in 18 games against the Capitols since 1946-47, an average of 23.2 per contest.

shot antics of Yale's fabulous Tony Lavelli, who poured in 27 points, were six points behind with five minutes to play.

Sharpshooting by Illinois' Dick Foley, Van Anderson and Walter Kersulis knotted the count at 67-67.

This paved the way for the smashing finish, with Kersulis and Foley driving under the basket in the final minute for the decisive points.

A sophomore substitute, Don Sunderlage of Elgin, Ill., probably did more than any other man in pulling out the game for the Illini.

This flashy little floorman pitched in 13 points in the first 10 minutes of second half to keep Illinois in the contest. He went out on personal fouls with 13 minutes gone and things looked dark, indeed, for the Big Nine champions.

Anderson scored 19 points to place second in Yale scoring to the amazing "Poosh 'Em Up" Lavelli, who hit for 10 field goals and made every one of seven free throw tries.

Sunderlage and Walter Osterkorn scored 15 each for Illinois.

Thomas in Best Condition Since Saturday Attack

Birmingham, Ala., March 21 (AP).—Frank Thomas, coach of Alabama's Crimson Tide for 15 years, made a slight gain today in his battle for life at a Birmingham hospital.

Thomas' pulse was reported stronger at noon today than at any time since he suffered a heart attack Saturday night.

His physician, Dr. Joe Hirsh, said he remained in a critical condition, although he was breathing and resting easier. Thomas is 50 years old.

Pancho Gonzales Staggers to Indoor Net Victory

Weir Gives Top-Seeded Ace a Scare

New York, March 21 (U.P.).—Top-ranked Richard (Pancho) Gonzales of Los Angeles, who was nearly upset up unheralded Dr. Reginald S. Weir of New York, and two other seeded players today swept into the quarter-finals of the Forty-sixth National Indoor Tennis championships at the Seventh Regiment Armory.

Gonzales, 20-year-old Mexican-American who is the choice to replace second-seeded William F. Talbert of New York as the indoor king, was handed a scare by the 38-year-old Weir, 6—2, 3—6, 6—4. Dr. Weir is one of the leading Negro players in the nation.

Fourth-seeded Don McNeill, the 1940 national champion from Glen Oaks, N. Y., and sixth-seeded Irvin Dorfman of New York, former eastern intercollegiate champion from Yale, were others on the ranked list to gain the round of eight. McNeill defeated Francis X. Shields of New York, first in the national rankings 26 years ago, 6—4, 6—2. Dorfman whipped 16-year-old Pablo Eisenberg of Maplewood, N. J., the tourney's youngest player, 6—3, 6—1.

First-seeded Gertrude Moran of Santa Monica, Calif., who earlier in the day gained the quarter-finals of the women's singles, paired with Margaret Buck of New York to enter the semifinals of the women's doubles competition.

Miss Moran, the country's fourth-ranking woman player, carried most of the burden as her team eliminated Sylvia Knowles of Newport, R. I., and Virginia Lee Boyer of Newton Highlands, Mass., 6—4, 6—2. The Moran-Buck duo was held to a 4-all tie in the first set, four games resulting in service breaks, and then eased through the last pair of tests.

Redskins Set Dates for Five Exhibitions

Dates for five exhibition games before the opening of their 1949 National Football League season, September 25 were announced yesterday by the Washington Redskins.

After their usual training session at Occidental College, Los Angeles, the 'Skins will meet the Los Angeles Rams on their home grounds August 26, following up with the Detroit Lions at Denver August 30, the Chicago Bears at Memphis, Tenn., September 4, the Chicago Cardinals at Birmingham, Ala., September 10, and the Green Bay Packers in Milwaukee September 18.

Crack Gymnastic Team Gives Version of Pyramid Party

The Springfield College gymnastics team gives the pyramid party a different twist at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the Central High Auditorium.

Adults can crash for $1, the conventional tariff at pyramid parties. Even the kiddies can attend; it'll cost them only 60 cents.

This pyramid party is on the level. In fact, such wholesome, law-abiding citizens as the members of the department of health, physical education and safety in the public schools heartily recommend it.

Through its gymnastics team, Springfield, Mass., College has been exploiting the pyramid and other acrobatics for 25 years.

It has been barnstorming around the country for that long with considerable financial success. Leslie J. Judd, the coach, has blended fundamental gymnastics with juggling comedy and showmanship, and the result has been turnouts as large as 5000.

The 30 members of the team take their work seriously. Gymnastics exhibitions are part of their required work in earning physical education degrees.

High on the list of coaches produced at Springfield are Dr. James Naismith, inventor of basketball, and Amos Alonzo Stagg, famous football coach.

Wednesday's entertainment includes 17 acts, packed into two hours. Climax is the "living statuary" tableaux, in which the gymnasts coat their bodies with gold paint, and with the help of lighting effects, present human reproductions of famous statues. The act was given a big pictorial layout in Life magazine a year ago.

House Probes Public Links

A special investigating subcommittee to look into Washington's public golf course situation was appointed yesterday by the Public Lands Committee of the House of Representatives.

Representative Monroe M. Redden (D., N. C.) was appointed chairman with the following members: Representative J. Hardin Peterson (D., Fla.), Representative Lloyd M. Bentsen, jr. (D., Tex.), Representative Wayne N. Aspinall (D., Colo.), Representative Wesley A. D'Ewart (R., Mont.) and Representative Norris Poulson (R., Calif.).

The subcommittee's main function will be handling of a pending bill, introduced by Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D., S. C.), which would temporarily withhold the Secretary of Interior's authority to lease Washington's links.

The Secretary's office has announced that S. G. Leoffler, golf concessionaire here since 1921, would be granted a new five-year lease over local courses. The lease is opposed by several groups who claim Leoffler has allowed the public links to reach a run-down condition.

AAU Board Meets

The board of managers of the District of Columbia AAU will meet Wednesday, March 23, at the office of president Eddie Rosenblum in the Jewish Community Center at 8:30 p. m.

GW High Five Feted Royally

George Washington High of Alexandria, runnerup in the Virginia State basketball tournament, was given a banquet befitting a championship last night.

More than 140 persons attended the Sportsmen's Club affair at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria.

Al Doren, who has coached the G. W. team through 12 consecutive winning basketball seasons, was presented with a television set by the City of Rlexandria.

The G.W. team received a trophy emblematic of the championship of the Greater Washington area. And each member of the team received a woolen sweater and a gold basketball.

Jim Gahagan, selected on The Washington Post's All-Metropolitan basketball team, received a medal from the Virginia High School League for being selected on the All-State team.

YOU MAY WIN A

1949 CHEVROLET
IF YOU ACT FAST!

HERE'S a brand new contest of fun and skill brought to you by the Disabled American Veterans Service Foundation! $100,000.00 in cash prizes must be won—yes, twice as much as was recently paid out in the 1948 Annual DAV Service Foundation Puzzle Contest. Of this huge sum as many as three prizes, as much as FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS may be yours—in return for a good deed and your skill in puzzle solving. Act fast and you may also win a new 1949 Chevrolet Convertible, as explained at left below.

Help Us To Help America's Disabled Veterans
Incorporated by special Act of Congress, the DAV needs funds to help rehabilitate America's 2,500,000 disabled war veterans—to help them to obtain needed claim evidence, service connections, medical care, hospitalization, vocational training, and suitable employment...yes, even to solve personal problems.
It is for these services that the Foundation again solicits your support and offers you this great game of fun and fortune. Your contribution is needed so enter today. You will be happy to know that every penny of the net proceeds of this contest (after paying for prizes, advertising and all other necessary expenses) will be used by the Foundation and by the DAV to continue its work.
Enter Contest Now!
Read the Entry Form and read the rules. Then try solving the Official Puzzle. Note that you may send in a higher score free of charge later on if you find you can improve on the solution you now send in. So don't delay—the important thing is to get into the contest right away and put in your bid for your share of the prizes.

Here's How You May Win a CHEVROLET If You Act Fast!
To become eligible for this extra award, your original entry must be postmarked before midnight, April 10, 1949.* Your best solution (original or substitute) will then be judged in competition with those submitted by all other contestants who meet this deadline and who have not been awarded an automobile as an extra prize. If it ranks highest (in case of ties, official contest rules apply) you will win a brand new 1949 Chevrolet. So enter now. *But your substitute solution can be submitted as late as June 29, 1949, and still qualify for judging for this extra award.

FOLLOW THESE INSTRUCTIONS — SOLVE THIS DAVogram PUZZLE
1. Identify the six objects at the top of the puzzle. (The name of each object is a six-letter word.)
2. See the table of letter values below the puzzle. Each letter is worth a certain number of points. If you have exactly named the objects you will find that the total value of the 36 letters that spell out the names of the six objects is 743 points. If you don't arrive at 743 points then try again, for the 36 letters must add up to 743 points.
3. Now your job is to place those words, correctly spelled, into the shaded letter-paths, each of which has space for six letters. You can place any one of the six words in any one of the shaded paths. Each word must read from top to bottom or left to right.
4. You will now note there are 13 empty white squares remaining in the diagram. Now you must insert letters of your own choosing into those 13 white squares and by combining these letters with the interlocking letters you have already filled into the grey squares, spell out 5 extra complete words. Each of these 5 extra words, too, must read from top to bottom or from left to right.
5. Of course, it is easy to fill in 13 extra letters which in combination with the letters in the grey squares will spell out 5 extra different words, but remember your job is to use 13 letters that will give you a high score when the value of those extra letters (as shown in the table of letter values) is added to the 743 points you will have already earned if you identified the pictured objects correctly.

SEE SAMPLE PUZZLE BELOW And Read How We Solved It!
DIAGRAM No. 1
We show here how to go about solving a DAVogram, and how to work out alternate answers to get higher scores.
First we identified the objects pictured: RABBIT . . . SADDLE . . . HAMMER . . . KETTLE — and then we added up the value of all the letters in the names of these four objects (using the table of letter values given for the Official Puzzle) and found the total was 467 points. Next, we filled in these four names in the four shaded paths and then added 10 extra letters which gave us 3 extra words: GLOOM . . . HARBOR . . . BUILD. These 10 extra letters which we had filled into the white squares had a total value of 181 points, thus giving us a total score of 648 points when added to the letters we had filled into the shaded squares.
Then we tried again, and with some thought we changed our 10 extra letters and got three different extra words, as you can see in Diagram No. 2. We changed GLOOM to CLAIM, HARBOR to HORROR and BUILD to BUGLE. We thus attained a total of 210 points for the 10 extra letters we filled into the white spaces, giving ourselves a total score of 677. Of course there are only two possible solutions and perhaps we might have done even better by shuffling the four identified names around into different shaded letter paths. Now, if you get the idea, why not try your hand at the Official Puzzle.

FULL LIST OF WINNERS WILL BE SENT TO ALL CONTESTANTS AFTER FINAL JUDGING

THE OFFICIAL RULES Please read carefully
1. $100,000 will be awarded in accordance with the instructions, official prize list and these rules to the contestants who achieve the highest scores in solving the Official Contest Puzzle. This sum will be awarded in three prize groups: Group No. 1 with a first prize of $5,000.00; Group No. 2 with a first prize of $15,000.00; Group No. 3 with a first prize of $30,000.00. Each group has an additional list of 109 prizes each, making a total of 330 prizes in all. (See official list of prizes.)
2. To enter Group 1 a contestant must send in with his answer to the puzzle a donation of $2.00 to the Disabled American Veterans Service Foundation; to enter Group 2 a donation of $5.00 is required and to enter Group 3 a donation of $10.00 must be sent in. A contestant may compete in any one, two or all three prize groups and once having entered may transfer his entry from any group or groups to any other group or groups by submitting the necessary additional donation any time prior to final judging.
3. Each prize group will be judged separately. The contestant who submits the highest valid score in Group 1 will be entitled to first prize in Group 1. Second prize in Group 1 will be awarded to the contestant with the second highest score submitted in that list and so on until the 110 prizes in Group 1 have been awarded. Prizes in Groups 2 and 3 will be awarded similarly.
4. In the event of ties in any group (which seem likely, since this is a large national contest), as many prizes will be reserved in that group as there are tied contestants, before any prizes are awarded for lower scores. To break such ties these tied contestants will be required to send in solutions to a set of five tie-breaking puzzles. The solutions to puzzle No. 1 in this tie-breaking set will be judged first and those tied for first prize will be awarded in the order of the valid scores submitted. If this is not sufficient to break all ties and permit awarding of all the tied-for prizes, then the solutions to puzzle No. 2 submitted by the remaining tied contestants will be judged. If ties still remain, the solutions of the still tied contestants to puzzle No. 3 will then be judged and so on, if necessary, to puzzle No. 5. This may mean that puzzles Nos. 2 to 5 may not have to be judged. (It is worth noting that in the last DAV Service Foundation Contest top prize of $33,000 was awarded as the result of judging only puzzle No. 1 in the first tie-breaking set.) However, if further needed to break ties a second, third or even a fourth set (each of 5 such tie-breaking puzzles to be judged similarly) may be used. All tie-breaking puzzles will be similar to the original puzzle with clearly identifiable objects, though the objects may be more difficult and more numerous. Partial credit may be given for partial solutions. Tie-breaker puzzles will be judged on the same basis as the original puzzle. The time limit for solving and mailing back the first set of tie-breaking puzzles (if needed) will be not less than 14 days from the date of mailing to tied contestants, and therefore all tie-breaker puzzles will be mailed on the same day in a local area near tied contestants; for the second set of tie-breaking puzzles (if needed) not less than 7 days; and for the third and fourth sets (if needed) not less than 3 days each. Tied contestants will not be required to make any additional contributions. Should final ties remain after the fourth set of tie-breaking puzzles, each tied contestant will receive the full amount of the prize for which he or she is still tied.
5. The contest is open to any resident of the Continental United States except employees of the DAV and its subsidiary units, the DAV Service Foundation, its advertising agency, its service organization, or members of their families. Also excluded is anyone who has won $500.00 or more in cash or kind awarded in any other contest prize to enter this contest, or any member of his or her family. Every possible precaution will be taken to enforce this provision. Only one member of an immediate family living at the same address may compete. All entries must bear a permanent home address in the Continental United States to which all contest mail will be sent. Where a contestant changes such permanent home address, the DAV Service Foundation should be notified immediately, but the Foundation can, in no case, assume responsibility for delivery of mail. In view of the uncertain address of members of the Armed Forces on active duty, and the consequent delay in mail delivery, this contest of necessity is not open to them.
6. Each contestant will receive an acknowledgment and an entry number upon receipt of his or her solution to the Official Puzzle, which solution must be submitted on an Official Entry Form and must be accompanied by a contribution of $2.00 or more. At no extra cost, one substitute solution can be submitted on the Official Substitute Solution Form which will be sent to each contestant and which will carry the entry number registered in the contestant's name. In working out and submitting puzzle solutions, contestants must follow the instructions accompanying the puzzle. Neatness does not count, but unsigned or illegible entries, or entries so unclear as to be confusing, will not be considered, and donations accompanying such entries will be returned upon request after judging is completed. Where more than one entry is submitted by an individual his or her highest valid score will be considered only in that group or groups in which that score is entered. That score will serve to compete in any one, two or all three prize groups, depending on the amount donated with that particular entry. An individual may win one prize in each prize group.
7. In solving the puzzle, practically any word that fits may be used. A contestant will not receive more points than that claimed nor more than that earned. Therefore, please use care in totalling your score. Remember not to use any hyphenated word or form, prefix, suffix or combining form, abbreviation or contraction. The final word source authority for this contest will be the Merriam-Webster New International Dictionary, Unabridged, Second Edition, 1948 printing and (with the exceptions noted) any word may be used provided it actually appears in bold-face type anywhere on any page within the A-Z main alphabetical section of the above dictionary. No plural or other inflectional form is acceptable unless it appears in bold-face type. No word that appears only as part of a two or more word phrase or expression (such as "busy" in "chop busy") is admissible.
The DAV Service Foundation will not enter into any individual correspondence concerning the eligibility of any word for use in solving the puzzle. Each contestant however may be required, upon request, to furnish the source of any word used.
8. All entries must be sent by mail to: DAV SERVICE FOUNDATION $100,000.00 Puzzle Contest Washington 6, D. C. and must be postmarked before midnight, April 30, 1949, and received before 5:00 P. M., May 15, 1949, to be eligible for consideration. The deadline dates for mailing and receipt of substitute solutions are 60 days after these respective dates. The failure of any contestant, after request by the DAV Service Foundation, properly to identify the source of a questioned word, may make said word inadmissible. The DAV Service Foundation will not be responsible for lost or delayed communications or for clerical or mechanical errors and each contestant by the act of sending in an entry agrees to be bound by the rules and instructions and in any event, with the decision of the DAV Service Foundation and/or its Committee on Awards on any and all matters affecting the contest.
9. Any contestant who accepts help of any kind from anyone (some family or household excepted) will be disqualified. Sworn statements to this effect will be required from all winners and every reasonable effort will be made to enforce this rule.

Agencies Put Ban On Pyramid Clubbing During Work Hours

Pyramid clubbing in Government offices is being eyed suspiciously.

In at least three big agencies here, it is reported, employes have been warned that those who tend to their clubbing on office time will be faced with suspensions or possible firings. The phones in several offices are reported to have been tied up by Pyramid clubbers who have been checking up on fellow members.

ORDER: A showdown on the proposed executive order to cover some war service and temporary employes into classified civil service jobs is imminent. A decision is expected in the next 10 days.

The proposed order would make it easier for Federal workers who have been in their jobs before March 15, 1948, to get regular civil service status.

The President's top personnel advisers have approved the proposal reluctantly. They have definitely rejected the various plans to liberalize the order to bring in all employes with five or more years of service, etc.

The broader proposals were turned down because they would break promises made to veterans. When the war service system was made effective on March 15, 1942, veterans were told publicly they would be given an opportunity to compete for the jobs through competitive tests.

The Administration is free to blanket in all the nonstatus people who have been in Government before that date. The order would require (1) agencies to recommend employes who would be eligible for status under it and (2) employes who are recommended to take appropriate noncompetitive tests.

And this provision is vital to some people—anyone who was or is now out of Government for less than a year because of a reduction in force and who is otherwise eligible would be given the opportunity for status.

NOTES: Argyle Mackey is the new Deputy Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization. He succeeds John P. Boyd, who transferred to the Seattle office. Other I. and N. shifts are due soon . . . Senator Langer (R., N. Dak.) has in a bill to increase by 20 per cent the pensions paid by the Railroad Retirement Board . . . California is the No. 1 Federal employe State. It has 206,000 of them. New York is second with 181,000 and Pennsylvania third with 111,000.

FEDERAL POWER is having a tight budget squeeze. Several employes have been encouraged to retire; a few others have been laid off and vacancies aren't being filled as the agency struggles to balance its books. Like many other agencies, FPC had to absorb part of the $330 pay raise cost.

DISTRICT: And on the subject of pay raises, there's a definite move on to make pay raises for District Government employes effective as of July 1 of this year. Several influential Senators have discussed such a plan. They would consent to a pay bill retroactive to July 1 of last year only if the District unexpectedly comes up with the five million dollars to foot the bill.

ACTION is slated for today by the House Expenditures Committee on the travel bill. Approval is assured of the measure, which would raise the travel allowance from $6 to $10 a day.

Over the weekend a check was made of 10,000 travel vouchers. The survey was made jointly by the Budget Bureau and the General Accounting Office. Officials from those agencies testified yesterday that the inquiry plainly showed that the $10 proposed allowance was justified.

At yesterday's hearing, the bill was indorsed by Willard L. Manning of the Rural Carriers; Luther C. Steward of the National Federation of Federal Employes, and Tom Walters of the AFL's Government Employes Council. Other witnesses who told how employes had to pay travel expenses out of their own pockets were Jim Dodson of the Labor Department; Albert Day and Newton Drury of Interior; Eugene Hatchett of Justice; Don Hanson of Treasury; William Ellis of GAO, and Henry Merry and Arthur Focke of Budget.

The bill also would raise the allowance for private car use on official business from 5 to 7 cents a mile, and it would permit employes to draw an advance with little red tape to make a field trip.

Murder Verdict Is Returned in Holdup Slaying

Lawrence Goodall's Conviction Carries Sentence of Death; Jury Out 6 Hours

Lawrence Goodall, 24, of 412 Oakdale pl. nw., was found guilty of first degree murder yesterday, in the holdup slaying of Nathaniel Johnson, 53, Washington druggist, last October 12.

The verdict of the District Court jury of eight men and four women carries with it a mandatory death sentence.

Foreman John B. Blaiklock, 5507 Carolina pl. nw., superintendent of equipment for Capital Transit Co., delivered the jury's unanimous decision at 8:10 last night, 6 hours and 10 minutes after receiving the case.

Federal Judge Richmond B. Keech turned the case over to the jury at 2 p. m. after instructing the panel that it could find for first degree murder, second degree murder or acquittal.

Advised by a defense attorney as the jury filed in to "keep your chin up, no matter how it comes out," the slight, stooped Negro, open-necked in a brown sport jacket and brown trousers, stood motionless while his fate was reported.

Defense Attorney Albert Goldstein told reporters immediately afterward he would ask for a new trial but did not specify the grounds.

"Buddy" Accuses Him

Edward Jackson, jr., 25, 304 Dixon ct. sw., a "buddy" of Goodall's whom Goodall met some years ago when both were inmates of the National Training School for Boys, proved to be a star witness for the prosecution.

Jackson, who accompanied Goodall the night of the crime, had pleaded guilty to second-degree murder as "lookout man" during the holdup. Testifying against Goodall, however, Jackson denied being an accomplice.

Jackson said the pair had been drinking and that Goodall suggested robbing the store at 600 3d st. sw. He declared his efforts to dissuade Goodall were unavailing and that Goodall went into the store alone while he continued to walk toward home.

Jackson asserted he heard a shot and shortly after Goodall ran up to him exclaiming breathlessly, "I had to shoot him."

Identified by Customer

A woman customer in the drug store at the time and a 16-year-old boy just about to enter the store identified Goodall as the killer. The woman testified Goodall shouted "this is a holdup" and fired as Johnson turned to flee.

This evidence was recalled to the jury in final arguments by Prosecutors John C. Conliff and John Lane.

In his final argument, Defense Counsel Alfred Goldstein, terming Jackson a "confessed murderer, liar and perjurer," told the jury that he was the real culprit and "is now placing the crime on other shoulders to escape blame."

In the instructions, Judge Keech told the jury that a slaying during the commission of a felony is murder in the first degree. He said a second degree verdict may be brought if the jury found the defendant was "so drunk as to be incapable of forming the intent to rob."

Testimony at the trial brought out that both Jackson and Goodall had been drinking the night of the murder.

Sentence Voided

Sex Convict Is Freed by Old Statute

A frequent sex offender, convicted of indecent exposure, yesterday was sentence to six months in jail—then walked out free a little later when his attorney dug up an old law on the subject.

Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie of Hyattsville Police Court, first convicted Robert C. Griffith, 29, of 3847 Chesapeake st. nw., on charges he exposed himself indecently March 9 in the Mount Rainier streetcar terminal.

After a six-month sentence in the Maryland House of Correction was announced, Attorney J. Frank Lillard, sr., noted an appeal, and Griffith was released under $500 bond.

Lillard then searched the Maryland code and found a 1924 law that says the maximum penalty for indecent exposure in terminals, railroad stations and on steamboats is a $50 fine.

Lillard returned to the bench and cited the law to Judge Bowie The judge withdrew the six-month sentence and fined Griffith $50.

According to police, Griffith, a steamfitter, has been arrested 38 times since 1935, 12 of them on sex charges. In 1945, he was given two years in the House of Correction, for indecent exposure, but the sentence was suspended to allow medical treatment. This was the largest sentence of several on sex convictions.

Of the 38 arrests, 36 have been in the District, police said. Since the 1945 conviction, he has been arrested twice in Washington and, on March 9, at the Mount Rainier terminal. Griffith, who pleaded innocent, did not take the stand yesterday.

Gaul, 3 Others Discharged By Symphony

By Paul Hume

The first day of spring brought housecleaning to the National Symphony Orchestra.

Howard Mitchell, new conductor of the orchestra, announced yesterday that four members of the orchestra have been dismissed. Eight others are to be auditioned by a special five-man committee set up with approval of the local chapter of the Musician Union.

Mitchell said yesterday: "All of our first-chair men have been re-engaged and signed for next season." That means that Jan Tomasow will return as concertmaster; Lloyd Geisler, for over a decade first trumpet in the symphony, will be in his usual place; Wallace Mann will remain as first flute; Marc Lifschey, the orchestra's brilliant new oboe will be back, and other leading men as well.

Mitchell stressed the fact that changes were made solely "for the good of the orchestra and to improve relations between players, conductors and the musicians' union."

Among those dismissed was George Gaul, for 18 years personnel manager and librarian of the symphony. Gaul has been asked to audition before the committee, composed of first chair men, in his capacity as violinist. His dismissal as personnel manager and librarian is final. Mitchell said, "I only want peace in the orchestra, something we have not had for a long time."

J. E. Mutch, manager of the National Symphony, said, "This is a smaller turnover than is usual from year to year." Last year 23 replacements were necessary because of dismissals or resignations.

'Mikado' at G. W. Sellout

Takoma Park NamesHegarty To Works Post

Hugh Emmet Hegarty, 34, of 3272 Martha Custis dr., Alexandria, Va., head of the maintenance unit of the Navy Department, last night was appointed associate superintendent of public works for Takoma Park by Mayor John C. Post and the city council.

He will assume the duties about April 1 and will receive an annual salary of $5000. He succeeds Robert Ellis who resigned March 1.

Hegarty was chosen from 22 applicants and was recommended by the streets and highways committee headed by Councilman Ross Beville. A veteran, he served as a lieutenant and lieutenant commander with the Navy from 1944 to 1946 in the Pacific and on Okinawa. He is a graduate of Newark College of Engineering.

Currently employed as a civilian with the Navy Department, he is in the Naval Reserve.

He will work with Superintendent of Public Works William F. Fischer, who will retire in June when Hegarty will move up to that position.

Course for Teachers Added at Dunbarton

A four-year course in the training of teachers for elementary grades will be added to the curriculum of the Dunbarton College of Holy Cross beginning in September, the school anounced yesterday. The course, which will be combined with the regular liberal arts program, is planned to meet certification laws in the Greater Washington area.

DP Family to Make Home in Md.

ANOTHER START—Emilis Ulis, 45, displaced Latvian dairy farmer, arrived last night with his family to make his future home in Poolesville, Md. The family includes two pairs of twins. Left to right: Miga, 21; Mrs. Ulis, 43, with John, 6, on her lap; Mr. Ulis, with Edgars, 6, on his lap. The older twins, Rasma and Vija, 16, are standing.

Emilis Ulis, Latvian, and Family of 7 Will Find 'Good Earth' in Poolesville

The "good earth" for Emilis Ulis, displaced Latvian dairy farmer and his family of seven, is going to be in Poolesville, Md.

Ulis, who is 45 years old; his wife, Milda, 43, and their five children—Miga, 21; twin daughters, Rasma and Vija, 16 years, and twin boys, John and Edgars, 6 years—were met last night in Silver Spring by their sponsor, Haile Chisholm of Garrett Park, Md.

The Ulis family arrived yesterday morning in New York City, where they disembarked from the S.S. Ernie Pyle, en route to Chisholm's Poolesville farm.

After three years at Fulda camp and another two years at the Gotha camp under the Russian occupation of Thuringia, Germany, the Ulis family quietly surveyed their new surroundings. They will not move to the Poolesville farm, however, until another two weeks. Meanwhile, they will live at Chisholm's Garrett Park home.

Armed with a certificate from the Central Latvian Dairy Farmers' Union, Emilis Ulis left his homeland about five years ago, when the German army ordered his family out of Latvia prior to Russian occupation of the country.

Under the auspices of the Lutheran World Federation's Resettlement Service, the Ulis family was selected from displaced persons at Fulda, after Chisholm requested the organization's local office to pick a family "up to eight members" for him in December, 1948.

Chisholm, owner of the Chisholm Brothers fuel supply company in Garrett Park, reluctantly disclosed to reporters that his interest in the displaced persons had been aroused by an article he read in a farm journal after his return from Army duty in North Africa, Sicily and Italy. He had had considerable experience with other victims of the war, Chisholm added.

Chamber Asks 30-Cent Rise in Arlington Tax

Tentative Budget Now Calls for 89-Cent Increase

A 30-cent tax increase for Arlington County in 1949-50 was recommended last night by the Arlington Chamber of Commerce, meeting at Cherrydale Fire Hall.

The chamber suggested an increase of 20 cents on each $100 assessed valuation for school purposes, and 10 cents for general county needs.

As presented to the Arlington County board recently the county manager's tentative $9,115,400 budget calls for an 89-cent increase—50 cents for the school system and 39 cents for the county.

Hearing Set for Thursday

A public hearing on the County budget is scheduled Thursday at 8 p. m. in Circuit courtroom.

The Chamber, in recommending a cut in the school tax increase by 30 cents, asserted that despite "growing pressures" on the school system "the community's ability to pay must be considered.

It suggested the school board return to its operating fund about $350,000 it had borrowed for school construction.

Figures Given

Returning this $350,000 to its operating fund would reduce requested the school budget increase of $850,000 to $500,000, according to the Chamber.

The suggested 10 cent tax boost for general county purposes, the resolution said, would provide $125,000 additional for street, sewer, sidewalks and similar improvements. Added to $355,000 which Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundenberg has estimated will be available for capital improvements next year at the present $3.25 tax rate, this would leave a total of $480,000 available for capital improvement in 1949-50, the chamber resolution said.

New Grand Jury Studies 25 Cases In Montgomery

A 23-member Montgomery County grand jury yesterday began sifting an estimated 25 criminal presentments, signaling formal opening of the March term of the county's Circuit Court.

The jury, selected from a panel of 48, is expected to report its findings withing the next few days—possibly by late afternoon, court officials said. Arraignment of those indicted is scheduled for the latter part of the week.

The grand jury, headed by Marshall Davis as foreman, includes Marguerite M. Langley, Theresa M. Hanson, F. Newell Griffin, G. LaMar Kelly, jr., Marjory D. Vogel, Helen A. Travis, Bertha M. King, John Wright, Leo R. Hurley Nancy W. Williams, Arthur R. Johnson, Clark W. Boyer, Jean S. Bennett, Thelma Louder, Charles W. Burke, Edith M. Armstrong, Emma Hodgson, Jennie C. Felton, Ruth G. Thompson, Edward A. Osborn, John C. Harding and eGorge W. Johnson.

Council Plans Fight on Sale Of Greenbelt Under Statute

The Greenbelt Town Council last night announced it would fight the sale of the Government-built town as provided by act of Congress.

At its bimonthly meeting, the council agreed to meet Wednesday night with the Greenbelt Mutual Home Ownership Corp. to plan a course of action that would:

1. Convince Congress the town should remain under Federal ownership; or

2. In the event of sale, insure that the present residents of the town may continue to live there and have some say in who shall buy it.

Invited by Senators

Out of Wednesday's meeting, the council hopes to emerge with a clear cut statement of its stand to hand members of a Senate Banking and Currency subcommittee at a hearing, Thursday morning. The committee has invited the Greenbelt Council to a tend.

At last night's meeting, Councilman Frank J. Lastner said he would request Representative Sasscer (D., Md.) to attend the hearings. He praised Sasscer's efforts to keep the town in its present status.

Members of the council agreed last night that Greenbelt should not be included in the proposed bill which authorizes sale of Greenbelt and two other Government-owned towns, Greendale near Milwaukee, and Greendale near Cincinatti.

They said Greenbelt was different from the others. Greenbelt was constructed mainly for semi-professional people of moderate income, they said.

Hearing Set Thursday

The Senate Banking Currency subcommittee hearing Thursday will be on a bill that would authorize noncompetitive, negotiated sale of Greenbelt.

Drawn up by Senator McCarthy (Rep., Wis.), the bill designates veterans' groups or mutual owner cooperatives for first crack at purchasing Greenbelt.

According to John T. Egan, public housing commissioner, his agency's current appropriation bill directs the Public Housing Administration to sell Greenbelt and Greendale (near Milwaukee) "as expeditiously as possible." The third of the Government-owned developments, Greenhills (near Cincinnati), must be sold before June 30.

Sentiment Divided

Sentiment as to the sale of Greenbelt among its 7000-odd residents is "just about evenly divided," according to Charles T. McDonald, town manager. Opposing the sale, in the fear that rent will increase, is the Greenbelt Citizens Association. Favoring the sale is the Mutual Home Ownership Association of the town, which has sought to purchase it for two years.

Under the present law, PHA is required to conduct advertised, competitive bidding. Senator McCarthy's bill would remove this requirement.

Public Health Deals In Big-Name Projects

The Public Health Service has just granted $11,000 to Iowa State College so Prof. Elery R. Becker can continue his studies on "immunological studies on plasmodium lophurae infection in birds."

It granted $4500, however, to Louisiana State University for a much larger project—at least in name. John C. Swatrzwelder of LSU has to make a "study of amebiasis designed to assess by selected criteria the capacity of the organism or its products to induce resistance in animals on subsequent exposure to endamoeba histolytica."

Benefit Bazaar Set By Eaton School P-TA

A bazaar to raise funds for the purchase of a motion picture projector and sound equipment for the John Eaton Elementary School wil be given by the Parent-Teacher Association Thursday and Friday from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. at 3317 Connecticut ave. nw.

Tax to Be Discussed

The Washington Pest Control Association will discuss the Arlington business tax as it applies to district operators, at a meeting at 8 p. m. today at 1321 K st. nw.

Estranged Husband Held for Grand Jury

Wife Was Shot, Then Kissed, Inquest Told

Clarence W. Robertson, 34-year-old truck driver, bent over and gently kissed his estranged wife after firing the shots which killed her and critically wounded her Marine companion, a witness testified at the inquest yesterday.

The coroner's jury ordered Robertson, of 1123 11th st. nw., held for action of the grand jury, after 17 minutes' deliberation. The Washington Gas Light Co. driver was removed to District Jail after the inquest.

His wife, Mrs. Lucille Pulley Robertson, 24, a waitress at Benny's Tavern, was shot to death about 1:45 a. m. Sunday in the living room of her two-room apartment at 1125 11th st. nw, while her 2-year-old son Dennis slept in an adjoining room.

Marine Pfc. Everett Flagg, 23, of Des Moines, Iowa, stationed at Quantico, Va., is in critical condition at Emergency Hospital from wounds suffered at the same time.

At the inquest yesterday, Sergt. Paul J. Koszewnik, 20, stationed at Fort Myer, Va., testified he was present when the shooting took place, with Mrs. Robertson, Private Flagg, and Mrs. Nellie Pitner, who lives in another apartment at the same address.

Koszewnik said Robertson had visited the house earlier in the evening, and had a discussion at that time with Private Flagg on the front porch.

Robertson returned later in the evening and broke the door in when refused admittance by Mrs. Robertson, the sergeant said.

"He said 'This is the end' and I heard a shot," Koszewnik said.

The sergeant testified that Robertson first fired once at the Marine, and then at Mrs. Robertson. The wounded woman moaned, "God have mercy on me," Koszewnik said, as Robertson shot her again.

"Then he kissed her and said, 'I'm sorry it had to be this way,'" the sergeant said.

Robertson told Baker his wife "had been living in adultery" with Flagg, and said he had told the Marine to give his wife up earlier on the night of the shooting, the policeman testified.

Baker said Robertson told him he went to the home of Mrs. Robertson's sister, Mrs. Charles Rayburn, at 1235 13th st. nw., after the argument with the Marine, and got the pistol.

Robertson, according to the detective's testimony, said he had been married about six years, but was separated from his wife last Christmas, when he moved next door to 1123 11th st. nw.

He had been trying to get his wife to come back to him, he told police, and had told her not to go with Flagg.

New Showdown On D. C. Taxes Set for Thursday

Radio Reunion

Sister Finds Brother Lost 10 Years Ago

A brother and sister who lost track of each other 10 years ago will be "reunited" by radio today.

The sister is Mrs. Nora Treskow of London. When she was bombed out in the war she lost contact with her brother, Horace Stead, who was living in Washington at the time.

Mrs. Treskow wrote to The Washington Post, asking for help in locating her brother. The assignment fell to Rachel Snyder, assistant to Columnist Bill Gold.

Miss Snyder checked prewar editions of city directories, questioned neighbors, ran down every available clew, and finally traced Stead to Shady Side, Md., where he had settled after moving from Washington.

The British Broadcasting Corp. was informed of these developments, and dispatched a man to interview Mrs. Treskow. Stead was summoned from Shady Side, to hear the broadcast.

On Bill Gold's "This Is Washington" program (WTOP, 10 a. m.) today, Stead will hear his sister's voice for the first time in almost a score of years as Mrs. Treskow tells of her search for him.

Miss Snyder explains that she really found Stead by tracing his wife. "My clews were that she was from South Carolina, and a nurse. The third hospital I tried was Casualty, where Mrs. Stead's friends remembered that she had moved to Shady Side. It was easy as pie."

House Committee To Debate Income, Sales Levy Plans, Realty Rate Hike

Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) yesterday called the House District Committee to meet for a new showdown on District sales, income and other tax measures at 10 a. m. Thursday.

McMillan said the meeting would take up all bills relating to District taxes. Main conflict is slated to develop over the proposed 2-per-cent District sales tax versus the idea of raising necessary new revenue by higher local income taxes applied to more people here.

Also before the committee will be proposals to hike property taxes by a 25-cent increase in the present rate of $2 per $100, and to increase liquor license fees.

Smith to File Bill Today

A new revenue bill, built mainly around a revised sales tax, will be introduced today by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.). Sales-tax features are expected to be altered from the measure that the House killed last week. Purpose is a new sales-tax test in the House next Monday.

A substitute program based on enlarging income-tax revenue will be presented to the House today by Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) and five other District committee members. It will also call for a 25-cent boost in the property tax rate.

There have been indications the Smith program may also call for some slight increase in property taxes, and some increase in liquor license fees.

Klein Program for New Try

Smith and a majority of the District Committee see the sales tax as the solution to the city budget that would result from adopting the Commissioners' spending estimates for the year starting July 1, and from congressional approval of proposed $330 retroactive pay raises for city employes.

Klein's program, backed by five other District Committee members, will also be presented to the House today in several identical bills by its sponsors.

They estimated the proposed income-tax revision would boost city revenue roughly as much as the 2 per cent District sales tax would—about 15 million a year.

Smith Challenges Figures

This estimate was immediately challenged by Representative Smith who said that from figures furnished by the District it appeared that the opposition program would increase the yield of the District income-tax law by about 5, instead of 15 million dollars.

The House voted about 2 to 1 against the Klein plan last week, but it was not a roll call, and Klein believes the decision might be reversed if his bill, rather than the sales tax, were the main business of the House.

The District revenue problem is also slated for general discussion today in a meeting of the Senate District Committee at 10 a. m.

Group to Study Unsegregated Theater Plans

The Hyattsville City Council last night appointed Paul H. Kea, a Hyattsville architect, and a committee of four council members to study plans for remodeling the Arcade Theater as a nonsegregated playhouse.

The plans were submitted to the council by the National Repertory Co., Inc., to learn if they conform with requirements of the city's recently adopted building ordinance.

The ordinance follows closely the requirements and standards incorporated in a proposed Prince Georges County code, which has not yet been adopted, it was pointed out.

The National Repertory Co. already has obtained a building permit from the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission and hopes to have the theater ready to open by April 15.

The Hyattsville ordinance requires that a permit be obtained from the city.

Though residents have voiced opposition to the plan to turn the theater, now condemned, into a legitimate playhouse operated on a nonsegegrated basis, there was no opposition voiced at the council's meeting last night.

Kea said he could offer no definite date as to when he would have completed study of the National Repertory Company's remodeling plans, and said that any statements should come from Councilman Harry Styne, committee chairman. Other committee members are Hiram Lawrence, Fred M. Coxen and Thomas Arnold.

Exhibition Court Is Projected for Sesquicentennial

A full-scale replica of the freedom statue atop the Capitol is planned as the central symbol of next year's sesquicentennial exhibition.

The statue would stand in a court of freedom surrounded by buildings for State, Federal and industrial displays, according to plans revealed yesterday by Edward Boykin, chairman of the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission.

Since the polo grounds in West Potomac Park have been suggested as the site of the exhibition, Boykin said plans have been suggested to hold a water pageant and carnival on the Potomac as part of the celebration.

The commission, Boykin said soon would ask the Navy to vacate some barracks and a recreation hall which now partly occupy the 22 acres of the polo grounds. Construction can begin as soon as Congress provides money, he said.

Scottish Rite Fills Press Relations Post

Trade Board Backs Sales Tax, McGrath Bill

Board of Trade President Leon Chatelain, jr., yesterday revealed that the organization's executive committee has adopted a recommendation of its municipal finance committee urging:

1. Reconsideration of the sales tax by the House of Representatives as the "only reasonable means of securing sufficient revenue for operation of the D. C. Government".

2. Indorsement of Senator Howard McGrath's bill introduced last week which would make an additional grant of $18,600,000 in Federal funds available during the next fiscal year for the District of Columbia.

3. Curtailment of D. C. expenditures unless favorable action is obtained on these two measures or additional revenue sources are approved by Congress.

Area News in Brief

Further Potomac Dredging Refused

The Army Engineers yesterday turned thumbs down on the idea of deepening and widening the Potomac River channel to accommodate ocean-going vessels.

Some Greater Washington interests have advocated further channel dredging in the belief it would encourage industrial expansion. The Virginia Pilot Association has suggested deepening the channel to 25 feet.

The present Potomac River project provides for depths of 24 feet in the Virginia, Anacostia and Washington channels and for widths of 400 feet most of the way in all channels. It is now about 50 per cent completed and up to June, 1946, had cost $457,590.

Army rejection of more expansive river development was contained in a report by Lieut. Gen. R. A. Wheeler, Chief of Army Engineers, which Secretary of Army Kenneth C. Royall sent to House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.).

The report recalled that 62,687 vessels in 1945 made round trips on the river below Washington, exclusive of pleasure boats, and that boats on the trips all drew less than 18 feet, except for 10 trips by vessels with drafts of 18 to 24 feet.

State Dept. Expansion

Congressional approval was asked yesterday to put the rapidly expanding State Department under a single roof. Department offices now are housed in 21 buildings.

The Federal Works Agency proposed legislation to authorize extension and remodeling of the department headquarters at 21st st. and Virginia ave. at an estimated cost of $45,600,000.

Road Sued for Death

The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Co. was sued yesterday in District Court for $250,000 as a result of the death last September of Louie Annie Hicks, a train engineer.

The suit is in behalf of Lola Annie Hicks, widow, who charges that the negligence of the railroad in failing to close a siding switch caused her loss of his support and services. She has one son, Louie Hicks, jr., 8.

One other train employe was killed in the accident, which occurred near Mango, Fla. Attorney for Mrs. Hicks is Joseph D. Bulman.

Bolling Base Shift

Capt. Donald H. Humphries, 29, son of Mrs. J. William Humphries of 203 Butler rd. Reisterstown, Md., has been appointed commanding officer of headquarters and Headquarters Squadron of Headquarters Command, U. S. Air Force at Bolling Air Force Base, according to Col. S. D. Grubbs, commandant. Captain Humphries replaced Maj. T. A. Peters.

Cogs Crush Man's Foot

William Drummond, 20, of 5308 Nash st. ne., was injured yesterday when his foot was caught between two cog wheels when he was working on a coal crusher in the Capital heating plant, New Jersey ave. and E. st. se. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where the lower third of his right leg was amputated.

Two Zone Hearings Set

The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday announced dates for hearings on proposed master zoning plans of streets and highways affecting two areas of Montgomery County.

The first hearing, involving the Central business district of Bethesda, extending from East-West hwy. to Bradley blvd., will be held April 26 at 8 p. m. in the Wilson Lane Elementary School, in Bethesda. The second, affecting MacArthur blvd. from the District line to Cropley, will be held May 2 at 8 p. m. in the Clara Barton School, Cabin John.

Arthur G. Bishop, 73, a retired title insurance executive who died December 23, left an estate of more than $300,000, it was learned yesterday when his will was filed for probate in District Court.

Under terms of his will, $5000 bequests go to the Ninth Street Christian Church, the Disciples Home Central Union Mission and Lynchburg College of Virginia. He was active in all of these organizations.

A $500 gift goes to the Lydia Bible Class at the Ninth Street Christian Church, in which class Mr. Bishop taught for many years.

The bulk of the remainder of the estate will be divided among the widow, Mrs. Dorothy H. Bishop, of 5714 16th st. nw., and to two daughters, Miss Doris R. Crowell and Mrs. Mildred C. Cooper, of Silver Spring, Md. The executor is Junior F. Crowell.

By Tension Wire

Bolling Field Sergeant Is Electrocuted

A 25-year-old Bolling Air Base airman was electrocuted yesterday afternoon when he came in contact with high tension wires of an emergency lighting system he was testing.

Mr. Yekaitis

The airman, Staff Sergt. Gustave J. Yekaitis, Dixon City, Pa., was declared dead by Capt. Alexander MacMillian, Army Medical Corps, at 2:15 p. m. However, artificial respiration crews fom the Bolling Hospital and Anacostia Naval Base worked unsuccessfully to revive him for for nearly two hours.

Staff Sergt. Clarence Chappelaer, 26, Asheville, N. C., who was working with Yekaitis, noticed a flash and ran to the other side of the equipment and found the airman leaning against the panel. He cut off the generator and ordered another soldier to shut off the emergency system. Yekaitis' body was in contact with a wire carrying 4080 volts.

Yekaitis, who enlisted in 1943, had been assigned to the 1100th Air Installations Squadron since December, 1947. A veteran of 20 months service in the Pacific theater, he had earned the Philippine Liberation, American theater, Asiatic-Pacific theater, World War II and Good Conduct Ribbons.

A. J. Dawson Dies; Retired Machinist

Alverda Jasper Dawson, 82, a retired Navy Yard machinist, of Vienna, Va., died yesterday in Bethesda Naval Hospital from pneumonia contracted after a minor operation last Wednesday.

Mr. Dawson

Born in Owensboro, Ky., Mr. Dawson came to Washington at the turn of the century and went to work in the Navy Yard as a machinist.

He retired in 1935 but went back to work during World War II at the Naval Ordnance Plant in Alexandria, remaining until the end of the war. During World War I he served as a second lieutenant in the Veterinary Corps. He was a 50-year member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

Mr. Dawson lived in the District until 1924 when he moved to nearby Virginia. At the time of his death, he lived on Old Courthouse rd. near Vienna.

His wife, the former Lottie Fenwick of Fairfax County, died in 1945.

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. William Moss; two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren, all of the Old Courthouse rd. address, and a brother, Eben Dawson, Durango, Colo.

Funeral services will be held at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw., at 10 a. m. Thursday. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Calhoun, Famed Social Leader, Dies

Mrs. Daisy Breaux Calhoun, 85, clubwoman and social leader in Capital society of the World War I era, died yesterday in Charleston, S. C., the Associated Press reported.

Mrs. Calhoun

A native of Philadelphia, she spent her early life in Texas and Louisiana and received her education at the Convent of the Visitation in Washington.

Thrice married, her first husband was Andrew Simonds, a banker with whom she made her home in Charleston. At this home, Villa Margharita, often known as "The White House of the South," she entertained Presidents Theodore Roosevelt, Grover Cleveland and William Howard Taft.

After Mr. Simonds' death, the home was turned into a de luxe hotel.

Wison Visited Home

Mrs. Calhoun later married Barker Gunmere, New Jersey banker. Their home at Princeton was visited by many dignitaries, including President Woodrow Wilson. On the death of Mr. Gunmere, she turned their home, Rosedale, into a girls' school. After her daughter's graduation, she left the school to the operation of members of the faculty.

In 1918 she married Clarence Crittendon Calhoun, Washington attorney, and came here to live.

Continuing her reputation as a hostess of famous personages, she entertained the Duke of Windsor in 1919 while he was Prince of Wales. It was after this visit that she was presented with the Claymore, a two-handed sword, of Bonnie Prince Charlie by a kinsman, Lord Garioch, son of the thirty-third Earl of Mar. Mrs. Calhoun was a descendant of the house of Mar on her mother's side.

Occupied Old Landmark

The Calhouns occupied the Rossdhu Castle, landmark on Brookeville rd. just across the District line in Montgomery County. Mr. Calhound died in 1938.

Mrs. Calhoun founded the Women's National Foundation and the Women's Universal Alliance. The Universal Alliance, formed to weld a chain of friendship between women of all nations, held its first World Welfare Conference here in 1923.

Interested in dramatics, she wrote many plays and acted in some herself. She was a member of the Pen Women's League, Chevy Chase Club, Riding and Hunt Club, the Daughters of the American Revolution, and other clubs in New Jersey. She was also a former president-general of the Women's Auxiliary of the Southern Commercial Congress, president of the Drama League of Washington and president of the Women's Universal Alliance.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Charles W. Waring, of Charleston, three grandsons and three great-grandchildren.

Aide to Hayden Is Found Dead In Hotel Room

Don A. Gustin, 32, administrative assistant to Senator Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.), was found dead in bed yesterday at the Carroll Arms Hotel, 1st and C sts. ne.

Police said they were informed he had been ill with a heart condition. Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg said a certificate would be withheld pending chemical analysis.

Mr. Gustin, who lived at 212 N. Columbus st., Alexandria, was a native of Portsmouth, Ohio. He attended the University of Arizona and later Georgetown University's law school. He had been in Washington since 1939, coming from Phoenix, Ariz.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Eve Gustin; two daughters, aged 1 and 5 years; his mother, Mrs. Florence Gustin, who lives in Phoenix, and a sister, Mrs. Lewis Brainerd, of Corvallis, Oreg.

Breckinridge, Democratic Leader, Dead

Fincastle, Va., March 21 (AP).—Dr. W. N. Breckinridge, 74, long prominent in Democratic Party affairs in this section, died unexpectedly tonight at a meeting here.

He was attending a session of the Botetourt County Democratic Executive Committee called to discus the adoption of the primary or convention system in the selection of candidates. Dr. Breckinridge had just finished speaking in favor of the primary system when he slumped in his chair.

Long chairman of the Botetourt County Democrats, he was active in party affairs. A native of Fincastle, he was born in 1875. He served in the Fourth Virginia Regiment under Gen. Fitzhugh Lee in the Sapnish-American War.

Dr. Breckinridge began the study of medicine, following the war, in the Medical College of Virginia and received his degree from the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., in 1904. After internship at the Norfolk Protestant Hospital, he opened an office in Fincastle.

He had served as county coroner and mayor of Fincastle. During World War I, he was a captain in the Medical Corps, stationed at Hampton.

Breckinridge attended many State and national conventions, and managed many campaigns. He was defeated for the State Senate in 1939.

Herbert H. Harris

New York, March 21 (AP).—Herbert H. Harris, 52, perfume company president and producer of several Broadway hit shows, died today. He was the producer of "All My Sons," which won the Drama Critics' Award as the best play of the 1946-47 season.

A foster son of the late Lew Fields, of the vaudeville team of Weber and Fields, he also produced "Connecticut Yankee," "Hit the Deck," "Peggy Ann," and "The Girl Friend."

Mrs. Gillingwater

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., March 21 (AP). Mrs. Helen Minkley Gillingwater, 89, former stage actress, died tonight after a long illness. She was at one tmie married to the late Claude Gillingwater, motion picture comedian, who died several years ago.

She had been leading lady for Maurice Barrymore, Edward Everett Horton and Russell Hicks, and appeared on Broadway with Jane Cowl.

Miss Eleanor Moreland

Morgantown, W. Va., March 21 (AP).—Miss Eleanor Brown Moreland, 71, one of the first women graduates of West Virginia University and organizer of its domestic science department, died today.

Until her retirement two years ago, Miss Brown was assistant dean of women at Marshall College, Huntington. She died in a sanitarium in Washington, Pa.

Teachers Say They'll Keep Up Pay Fight

'Discouraged'

The Education Association of the District, representing more than a thousand local school teachers, registered its concern yesterday that teachers together with other District employes have not been granted the $330 pay raise given to Federal employes last year.

Dr. Regis Boyle, president of the association, said that while teachers are "discouraged" they will continue to work for the increase. Additional pay for teachers has the support of parent-teacher groups, civic associations and the taxpayer, she said.

A resolution was passed at the meeting authorizing the executive council to contribute money from the association treasury to the Ruth K. Webb Memorial Fund to provide a scholarship for a Wilson Teachers College student. Mrs. Webb was a member of the association and a divisional director of the school before her death last November.

Fairfax to Open Preschool Age Clinic Today

The annual Fairfax County clinic for examining and vaccinating preschool children will start today.

Dr. Henry C. Bradford, county health officer, urged all parents to take advantage of the free clinic so that any physical defects that show up can be corrected before the children enter school in the fall.

Sponsored by State and local health and education funds, the clinic will be conducted at the county schools. The schedule for the rest of March is:

March 22, 9 a. m., Fairveiw Elementary School; 9:45 a. m., Franklin Sherman School; March 23, 10 a. m., Oderick School; March 28, 10 a. m., Groveton School; March 29, 10 a. m., Gum Springs School; 10 a. m., Herndon Elementary School; March 30, 10 a. m., Groveton School; March 31, 9 a. m., Vienna School (Negro); 1 p. m., Vienna School (white).

Train Robbery Hearing Today

George L. Ashton, 20, confessed train robber, will appear before Judge Richmond B. Keech in United District Court at 9:30 a. m. today for a hearing on his removal to Wheeling, W. Va., where he has been indicted for the holdup of a B. & O. train near Martinsburg, March 9.

Luman Ramsdell, 22, Ashton's partner, who was felled by a policeman's bullet when the two were arrested here, still is in Gallinger Hospital.

Mrs. Muchmore Named To Better Business Job

The Better Business Bureau of Washington yesterday announced the reappointment of Mrs. Sally Muchmore, 2480 16th st. nw., as assistant director of the bureau.

Mrs. Muchmore, who had previously been with the bureau for 24 years, resigned the same post three years ago.

Site for Stead Playground Is Approved

The United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that Mary Force Stead Playground can be built in the 1700 block of Church st. nw.

The decision was made in a will contest brought by the heirs of the late Robert Stead, who died in Philadelphia leaving property here of $181,000. He set aside income from $80,000 to be used to establish a playground in memory of his first wife, Mary Force Stead, member of an old Washington family.

Under terms of a trust created by the will, the playground was to be built in the vicinity of 14th st. Pennsylvania ave. se., on lots Stead owned there.

The District government contended the Southeast area already was equipped with a playground and proposed to build one near the old Force home at the Church st. location, according to Oliver Gasch, assistant corporation counsel.

The heirs contested this, saying the change in location was in violation of terms of the Stead will. In deciding against them, the Appeals Court said:

"All interested parties conceded that it would now be impracticable to establish and maintain a playground upon the land devised because of the present unsuitability of the site and the insufficiency of income. In these circumstances the heirs claimed the property by reason of a failure of the trust.

"However, the District Court held that the devise was supported by a general charitable intent; that the dominant purpose was to establish a playground rather than use the designated site. In our opinion the District Court was right."

William Francis Allen

Salisbury, Md., March 21 (AP).—William Francis Allen, 82, who went to work with a borrowed $15 and developed a world-wide strawberry plant business, died at his home today.

His William F. Allen & Sons Co. shipped 10 million to 12 million strawberry plants each year to growers all over the United States and to foreign countries.

He also pioneered in the growing of cantaloupes, watermelons and cucumbers on Maryland's Eastern Shore, now one of the area's main income producers. His 900-acre nursery and orchard at the edge of Salisbury also produced up to 150,000 bushels of peaches each year.

Board Starts Drive to Teach Traffic Rules

The Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board launched a new safety campaign last night under the slogan "Don't Learn Traffic Rules by Accident."

A. Julian Brylawski, chairman of the board's education committee, said 175,000 blotters which warn motorists that ignorance of the law "may cause a blot on your driving record," will be distributed to applicants for tags and will be given out at the two District inspection stations.

The purpose of the campaign, committee officials said, is to prevent the loss of lives through heedless ignoring of traffic laws and regulations set up to save lives.

In spite of the favorable winter weather, the committee pointed out, the number of District traffic deaths is now at 16, only one less than for the same period last year after a severe winter.

Traffic director George E. Keneipp warned motorists that he will not recommend an extension of the March 31 deadline for automobile tags. Motorists have had no difficulty in obtaining tags this year, he said. Present figures he added show an increase of 5000 tags issued over the corresponding date last year.

In other reports to the board, Keneipp said a left-turn signal light will be installed at 22d st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., and said a request for a traffic light at 21st and R sts. nw. had been denied since plans call for the closing of R st. in the vicinity of Dupont Circle on July 1 until the underpass is completed.

The board announced that a demonstration of the "Drunkometer," a device to test the sobriety of auto drivers, will be given at the board meeting in April by Dr. Oscar B. Hunter.

Glen Rudy Nikirk

Frederick, Md., March 12 (AP).—Glen Rudy Nikirk, 59, widely known decorator and painting contractor and father of Frederick County's State's attorney, died at his home last night.

Nikirk had been in the painting and decorating business 37 years and specialized in church decorations. He had become known throughout the State for his oil paintings of Biblical subjects.

In addition to the State's attorney, Edwin F. Nikirk, he is survived by his widow and five other children, all residents of Frederick.

Tea and White Elephant Sale To Aid Animal Welfare League

ANTIQUES, books, jewelry, spring flower bulbs and handmade articles will be on sale today at the silver tea and white elephant sale to be held under the auspices of the Animal Welfare League of Alexandria, at the home of Mrs. R. C. Acton, 200 North View ter., in the Rosemont section of Alexandria, from 4 until 7 p. m.

The tea and sale, which is to help raise badly needed funds for the continuance of the work of the league, is open to the public. The work is carried on by volunteers through voluntary donations from the public.

The Alexandria Animal Welfare League, which is a member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, acts as a clearing house for lost and found animals, places animals in new homes, investigates cases of cruelty to animals, rescues animals injured in public accidents and furnishes necessary veterinary service, and picks up unwanted animals twice a week with a special animal ambulance.

In charge of the white elephant collection committee is Mrs. David Baumann, who will collect anything donated for the sale. She may be reached at Temple 2544 after 1 p. m.

Others working on the tea and sale are Mrs. Gordon Wenner, chairman of sandwiches; Mrs. William J. Hayes, jr., chairman of cakes; Mrs. John F. Hauber, in charge of the calling committee; Mrs. Arthur Mourot, in charge of the sale of antiques, and Mrs. Fred Lindtner, Mrs. Gregory Keenan, Miss Leone Pursel and Mrs. Donald Thompson, who will work on the white elephant sale.

Among those who will pour will be Mrs. Gordon Everett, Mrs. Albert Miller, Miss Margaret Germond, Mrs. Paul Twynne of the Arlington Animal Welfare League, and Mrs. Robert Cox of the Fairfax committee.

Assistant hostesses will be Mrs. Richard Wiley, chairman, Mrs. Stanley Swann, Mrs. A. B. Rorex and Mrs. W. L. Akerly. Mrs. Kenneth Cullom will be on the door.

Miss Margaret Wilson Selects Wedding Date

Miss Margaret Anne Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Wilson, of 116 Archwood ave., Annapolis, has selected June 5 as the date of her wedding to Midshipman Carl B. Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Eugene Wilson, of Milledgeville, Ga.

The ceremony will be performed at 4 p. m. in the main chapel of the Naval Academy.

Pioneer Group To Hear Talk By Rep. Kline

Representative Arthur G. Kline of New York will be principal speaker when the Washington Council of Pioneer Women holds its annual donor luncheon today, 12:30 p. m., at the Mayflower Hotel.

Other features of the program will be vocal solos by two Israeli artists, Alviva Halaban and Rifia Brodia; violin solos by Joseph Burnstein with Mrs. Joseph Burnstein as accompanist; greetings from Israel by Miss Leah Biskin, who worked in D. P. camps in Italy; an address by Leah Wienberg, delegate to the national council of Pioneer Women.

The newest Washington Club, Hativa, will be presented with its charter and officially installed by Mrs. David Alpher.

The five Washington clubs will participate in this event under the leadership of Mrs. Morris Golden, general chairman. Assisting her are: Mrs. David Alpher, Goldie Myerson; Mrs. Nathan Switkes, Club One; Mrs. Saul Penn, Hanita; Mrs. David Polmer, Hatikva, and Mrs. Louis Silverman, Medina.

Proceeds will be used for the $20,000 building fund project, to build a Washington Home for children in Jerusalem.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Married 22 Years, Couple Start Quarreling Only Recently, Due to Wife's Championship Of Bachelor Who Got Miffed at Man's Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Peg and I have been married 22 years, and only recently we began to have arguments, all because of a bachelor, 45, whom I have known since we were high school boys.

Kent always talks of getting married, but says he is very fond of children and therefore wouldn't marry a girl over 32 years of age, because he would want her to bear him children. My wife likes to dwell on the subject, and Kent relies on her feminine advice.

Lately Kent began to visit my cousin, Kate, who is 41; and after a time I asked him if he were in earnest about her; and I said that if not, I advised him not to call at her home, as she is no youngster and can't afford to waste time and possibly miss other opportunities.

Men Were Friends From School Days

KENT ANSWERED that he wasn't interested in Kate as a future wife, and since that talk he hasn't come to our home or telephoned us. Previously he had called on us at least twice a week. A short time ago I heard that he was ill in bed, so Peg and I went to see him—and were asked by a nurse to wait in the foyer as he was "indisposed."

While we were waiting, we saw other visitors coming and going from his apartment, and when we were finally admitted, we found him almost recovered. His attitude was friendly but reserved. He has since left his sick bed and returned to work; and a few days ago my wife telephoned and asked him to come to see us, but he declined the invitation.

Now my wife says his coolness is due to my interference, and there is little peace in our home. What can I do to win my friend back? Was I at fault in speaking about my cousin? Please answer and help restore peace to my home. P. L.

Wife Has Taken the Wrong Slant

DEAR P. L.: Kent doesn't want a wife, nor does he want advice. He wants attention and approval while talking of himself. And his alleged fondness for children is sentimental "corn," designed to put a virile face on his aging predilection for much-younger women, whose company gives him the illusion that he's still a young buck.

Now, about the ruptured friendship: I don't see that you are to "blame" for it. Rather it seems to me that Kent is behaving childishly, that Peg is acting as if she had lost a beau, and that your pardonable mistake was in thinking that you could talk man-to-man to Kent in terms of his age. That is, as if he were adult and open to reason.

If Kent was in the habit of taking his hair down with you and Peg, responding freely to her quizzing about his matrimonial day dreams, and if he had plainly said he wouldn't consider marrying a girl past 32, then it surely wasn't undue presumption on your part to advise him against trifling with Cousin Kate, who at 41 has no time to waste on butterfly beaux.

Husband's Stand Seems Blameless

YOUR LITERAL attitude brought him uncomfortably close to a realization that he is a phony in relation to women, a seamy fact that he isn't prepared to face or rectify; so he retired in a huff, defensively. Further, his discomfiture choked the impulse to chatter on about himself—a principal incentive of past visits, probably,—thus he is keeping his distance for "upset" reasons that are more to his discredit than yours.

What can you do to win him back? Nothing more than you have done, I think. All things considered, you and Peg have already conveyed as much assurance of continued friendship as good sense and good breeding would permit; if he won't unbend, let him sulk. He showed bad manners in keeping you waiting, while a parade of visitors passed you by, when he was holding court in bed—so, don't run after him any more.

Incidentally, Peg's had a bit of a crush on Kent, or she wouldn't champion him in this. I hesitate to mention it, but since she's being difficult, perhaps the truth will silence her unfair nagging. M. H.

Wrinkle Resistant Cottons

Wrinkle-resistant cottons, biggest fabric news in fashion resort collections this season, shake their wrinkles when hung up overnight, but need ironing after laundering just like any other cotton, according to Monsanto Chemical Co.

Either a steam iron, or a hot iron and plenty of dampening is recommended by Monsanto. The fabric chemists warn against bleaching with chlorine, but other than this, wrinkle-resistant cottons need no babying. They take to the washing machine with the rest of the family wash.

Paris or 'Make it Yourself' Choice at Fashion Show

By Peggy Preston

DAME fashion reared her pretty head and tripped right into the middle of the United States Conference of Mayors yesterday.

The scene was the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel, and while his honors, the mayors (and their wives) looked on approvingly, models displayed an assortment of new and color costumes for late spring and summer.

High fashion items from the showrooms of Copolla, Oleg Cassini, the Parisian designers Piguet and Schiaparelli, and the hat salon of Mr. John, were presented as one part of the show. In the other half were "Make It Yourself" ensembles, made of Avondale fabrics.

In the designer's collection, the motif of "Three Feathers" was used throughout. Blouses, handbags, shoes, jewelry, fabrics, scarfs and belts, all displayed in some form the trio of plumes. Outstanding fashions shown included Piguet's cocktail frock in Cohama's silk crepe print, cut with draped bolero; Schiaparelli's blouse; Cassini's gray wool crepe ensemble, and his shimmering iridescent taffeta with bare-shouldered line, worn with printed glove-stole.

Busy Schedule

INTRODUCED as a special guest at the show was Miss Sue Howell, the 1949 Maid of Cotton, who is in the midst of a strenuous three-day visit to Washington.

Earlier in the day the press met the comely Miss Howell at a press conference when she appeared in a trim, cotton plaid suit designed by Herbert Sondheim. Later she planned to change into a cotton corduroy suit and coat for her long series of appointments. On her schedule were a luncheon at the Capitol; a visit to the Office of the Secretary of Agriculture; a reception at the French Embassy. In between there was to be time for a radio broadcast and visits with her California friends.

Her visit here, sponsored by the National Cotton Council, will be climaxed Wednesday at a congressional reception and fashion show. Following that she will leave for New York from where she will fly to London and Paris, carrying her all-cotton wardrobe along in cotton-covered airplane luggage.

The Maid's clothes were designed especially for her by some of this country's most well-known designers, and in displaying them here and abroad, Sue will pay tribute to America's great cotton crop and the dress creators as well.

Her favorite outfit in her new wardrobe? Well, the Maid says she can't answer that one. She likes them all. But she does get a special gleam in her eye when she looks at a combination sun-dress and cotton tweed redingote. Dress is of pastel plaid with cotton satin stripe; coat, of navy blue, is stitched in red.

FLUID grace in fabric and design is portrayed in this "make it yourself" evening gown, which was among the extensive collection of costumes shown yesterday afternoon at the Mayflower Hotel before delegates and their wives attending the United States Conference of Mayors. Made of sheer, soft chambray, the bodice and cascading overskirt is of lilac and the underskirt of narrow white and green stripes on a lilac ground. Pattern is Butterick No. 4825

Mrs. Winthrop Rockefeller Heads 'Best Dressed' List; Mrs. Mesta Also Named

New York, March 21 (U.P.).—Mrs. Winthrop Rockefeller, the Cinderella Bride of 1948, topped the Fashion Academy's list of best dressed American women today.

Mrs. Rockefeller, the former Barbara (Bobo) Sears, was married on Valentine's Day, 1948, in a simple, ready-made linen dress which thousands of other American girls have worn either in the moderately priced original or in lower priced copies. During part of the first year of her marriage she wore maternity clothes. She practically never wears a hat.

The academy's Gold Medal Awards were made this year in 14 categories. Basis of selection was the "ability to wear clothes in keeping with the individual requirements and budgets."

Mrs. Rockefeller, rather amazed about the whole thing, said, "I just wear whatever I need for the day. I think it would be better if I didn't say anything."

She was listed as the best dressed woman in society, beating out Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, who headed that category last year.

Others on the best-dressed list were:

Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.), in public life; Lauren Bacall (Mrs. Humphrey Bogart, for the screen; Perle Mesta, noted Washington hostess and presidential friend, as a hostess; Elizabeth Taylor, screen actress sweetheart of All-American Army football player Glenn W. Davis, as an "All-American"; Jane Pickins, in radio; Mona Paulee, in opera; Mrs. Jerome K. Ohrbach, wife of a department store executive, in business; Wendy Burden, as a debutante; Patricia Morison, for the stage; Mrs. Leon Mandel, in the "international set"; Maggie McNellis, as a commentator; Dorothy Kilgallen, as a columnist, and Julie Wilson, from the supper clubs.

$300 the Hard Way

CARE Will Get It's Cut, Though Ball's Expenses Gobbled All the 'Take'

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

TREND OF THE TIMES NOTE, or charity the hard way. Last December's United Nations Club ball committee, which offered 10 per cent of its profits to CARE, so far has not paid a sou into the organization's coffers. The reason is simple. The ball lost money.

This despite a patron list studded with top drawer names led off by Attorney General Tom Clark as chairman; of glamorous publicity releases telling of special Hollywood trips being made to "bring-back-alive" stars to titivate the party's guests.

The ball's receipts, according to Club Manager Frank C. Frantz, were around $3000. Yet, because of expenses, nary a CARE package could be wrung from this reasonably tidy sum. So, Sunday night, at a directors' meeting in the United Nations Club, it was decided to present CARE with $300 or 10 per cent of the gross. Presumably, the amount will come out of the directors' pockets. Anyway, present plans are to present it with appropriate fanfare at a luncheon sometime in April.

Pyramiding Pyramids

AFTER SEVERAL hectic weeks of frantically scrambling Pyramids, there's an understandable lassitude around town. The struggle to locate two victims who, in turn, would track down another couple apiece; the mathematical hazard of drawing up charts; the scramble to provide transportation to some far meeting place for Pyramiders who, unless closely supervised, might fall by the wayside; the drama of having total strangers telephone and offer money—has taken its toll in hoarse voices, pale faces and shaking hands.

Just as simple gin rummy became tedious to addicts and eventually was embroidered into Oklahoma and Canasta, so the common $1-a-throw Pyramid has been fancied. Sophisticates have upped the ante to $10 and, impatient for the payoff, reduced the Pyramid number from eight persons to six.

This department's telephone has been buzzing day and late evening with close friends and most casual acquaintances, all importuning us to join their special cadre. Some, as bait, have offered Pyramid stories, supposedly of sufficient literary interest for this column. None, however, has met our rigid standards. But to give readers a casual look-see into the craze, we'll pass on two.

The first concerns one of the Capital's outstanding hostesses. Joining in the cry, she discovered her gardener in an adjoining bracket, went to his house for the first dollar-giving party.

The second is slightly more humorous. A lady who lives in one of Washington's most expensive hotels joined a Pyramid Club right at the start. Like most women, she wasn't very bright about mathematics, couldn't visualize the scope of a single Pyramid unit. The payoff day arrived bright and clear. Scores of total strangers blew into the hotel. The more polite element called from the lobby, the pushy Pyramiders barged into her room. As the pile of dollar bills mounted, the lady, dazed by it all, became hysterical. A doctor was called, found her totally collapsed under a drift of greenbacks!

A Fleeting Guest

WASHINGTON'S guest-of-the-year, former Prime Minister Winston Churchill, has changed his plans, cutting short his visit to these shores, thereby disappointing many admirers. So far, Mr. Churchill's itinerary is as follows: Arriving in New York Wednesday, Washington Thursday, back to New York Friday, his speech at Massachusetts Institute of Technology on April 1, sailing home April 2.

Reasons for Mr. Churchill's shortened stay have been construed as a wish to avoid stealing Foreign Minister Bevin's thunder and to be on the high seas when the Atlantic Pact is signed April 4. During Mr. Churchill's brief Washington moment, he'll dine with President Truman. There'll be scarcely time for anything else, except, perhaps, a predinner reception at the British Embassy.

Mr. Bevin will leave England March 28 and may return on the Mauretania on April 4. It's not certain whether Mrs. Bevin will accompany her husband. But, since the Foreign Minister's health is still precarious, his personal physician will be along.

Randolph Churchill, through with his lecturing stint, with his almost brand-new wife has been staying in New York with Dolly Schiff Thackery. Mrs. Thackery, daughter of the late Mortimer Schiff, until recently was chief stockholder of the New York Evening Post. Now separated from her journalist third husband, Ted Thackery, she has relinquished her interest in the paper.

Traveling Companions

NEW YORKERS, train-traveling for a Washington weekend, report a fascinating dining car juxtaposition. Face-to-face across a single table sat Clare Boothe Luce and the Elliott Roosevelts. Mrs. Luce was en route to deliver a talk at Howard University. The Roosevelts' destinations was undetermined.

Throughout the meal, Mrs. Luce, her sober dress highlighted by a handsome cross suspended on a chain, kept her blue eyes glued to a book. She never gave Elliott or Faye a tumble.

Elliott, caught short without reading matter, was at considerable disadvantage. A spirited chat with Faye languished after a few moments. So he picked up the menu, kept his attention concentrated on it until Mrs. L. retired to her drawing room. Faye looked out the window. Not a word was exchanged. Why?

Notes on the Capital Club Front . . .

Mrs. Samuel Lubin, president of the seaboard region of Hadassah, will be the guest speaker. Mrs. A. Levinson, and Mrs. Jerome Baum are cochairmen for the luncheon.

The program will include a play, "The Seven States of Women," directed by Mrs. Arnold Levy and assisted by Mrs. Sidney Abramson and Mrs. Dan E. Kerbels.

Funds from the annual luncheon, the only fund-raising activity of the Alexandria Chapter, will be used to help Haddassah open the Hebrew University - Haddassah Medical School in Israel; to build the first hospital in the Negev as well as tuberculosis control centers, houses and schools.

World Prosperity Called Vital to U. S.

By Genevieve Reynolds

"THE United States can't enjoy prosperity for any appreciable time unless the standard of living is raised for the peoples in other parts of the world," warned the Ceylonese Ambassador, Claude G. Corea, in a luncheon address yesterday at the Woman's National Democratic Club.

He told the audience that there is a "paramount urgency to understand the different peoples of the world. A profound change is coming over the world which is not easily understood," he explained. "There is now an affirmative answer to that Biblical question, 'Are We Our Brothers' Keeper?'"

Ambassador Corea came to the United States about two months ago to serve as envoy for Ceylon, which regained its independence 13 months ago.

"With a decadent Europe dying economically and politically, the United States couldn't continue to maintain its greatness or prosperity if it did not share with the rest of the world," he asserted, adding "nor would it be morally right."

He pointed out that just as Europe is important to keep the essential freedoms so are the teeming millions of the East.

Envoy Corea declared that if each person in Asia had his individual income raised by $1, this Nation's prosperity would be assured because of the increased purchasing ability.

Referring to hs own country, Ceylon, he said that education plus the beginning of industrialization had produced a restlessness and groping for the better things of life.

"Outcome of this surging for a higher standard of living depends on how the movement is controlled and guided," he emphasized. "If guided properly pitfalls can be avoided and the people will preserve their smiles, urge for hospitality, readiness to appreciate other peoples' point of view."

Suffrage Enjoyed

Describing Ceylon, the Ambassador said that it is a tiny dot on the tip of India with a seven million population in a 35,000 square mile area." Our principal economy is based on three products—tea, rubber and coconut," he explained. "Within the past 10 years we have begun some industrial development to prevent the economy from being lopsided."

According to the speaker the literacy rate in Ceylon ranges between 60 and 65 per cent . . . boys and girls have separate schools in the lower grades but study at the same universities . . . schools are run by the government as well as church missions.

"As for the women of the country they have complete suffrage and property rights," said the Ambassador. "All women over 21, irrespective of property or education can vote. There is one woman member of the Senate and two in the House of Representatives. Also women are eligible to hold civil service government jobs. In addition there are many women actively practicing law, medicine or teaching."

Two marriage customs or systems still prevail in Ceylon. In the mountainous districts of the up-country the people retain their ancient systems of selecting mates through a marriage broker, horoscope chart and dowry. But in the low country couples select their own mates as in the Western world.

Marriage Mart

For example, he pointed out that those who follow the old custom have their marriages arranged by the parents of the boys and girls through a marriage broker. The marriage broker decides upon the couple's suitability for each other by carefully casting horoscopes to see if they can live together happily and harmoniously. If the bride's parents do not provide a dowry, they must give their consent for the bridegroom to live in their home.

Mrs. Julian Friant, vice president, presided and introduced the speaker and his wife.

Rings on Their Fingers

The engagement of Miss Betty Maxine Lancaster to Phillip Max Coffey is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Lancaster.

The bride-elect is a graduate of the University of Maryland. Mr. Coffey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell R. Coffey, attended Butler University in Indianapolis, Ind., and is now completing his studies at American University. The wedding is planned for May 28.

In Bridal Procession

The marriage of Miss Marjorie Elizabeth Welsh to Arthur Alexander Dole, jr., took place Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey A. Welsh in Loudoun County, Va.

The Rev. Nelson Pierce of Washington performed the ceremony and Mr. Welsh gave his daughter in marriage. Mrs. Kenneth Wood of Arlington, Va., was matron of honor for her cousin, and John Chandler was his cousin's best man. A reception followed the ceremony.

After the New York honeymoon the newlyweds will reside in Columbus, Ohio, where Mr. Dole is studying for his doctorate at the University of Ohio.

Mrs. Dole attended Grinnell College, received her bachelor's degree from Antioch College and her master's degree from Ohio State University. Her husband is the son of Mrs. Arthur F. Blanchard of Cambridge, Mass., and Arthur Dole, formerly of Jamaica Plains, Mass., and the grandson of the late Nathan Haskell Dole, Boston author.

Mr. Dole was graduated from Phillips Exeter Academy, attended Harvard and Antioch Colleges and received his master's degree from Ohio State University.

Iran Celebrates New Year At Embassy Reception

FLOWERS filled the Iranian Embassy yesterday for the celebration of Norouz, the Persian New Year. There were masses of hyacinths, roses and azaleas, and long French windows in the drawing room opened onto a square garden, where yellow jonquils lined box walks.

In the evening a gala reception was held from 8 till 2. An elaborate supper was served buffet style and later there was dancing. Several hundred guests attended, including top diplomats and officials and their wives, and members of residential society.

The Ambassador, Hussein Ala, received, assisted by his mother-in-law, Mme. Neserelmolk, as Mme. Ala is out of town. Ambassador Ala's famed hospitality has always drawn society in droves, and last evening's entertainment was a highlight of the season.

In the dining room supper was served from lace-covered tables centered with red roses and candles. There were platters of turkey lobster, lamb and Persian dishes, and ice cream and strawberries were served from huge silver bowls.

Dr. Ackerman Speaks

Dr. Phyllis Ackerman, wife of the director of the Asia Institute in New York, gave a talk after supper, on the significance of Norouz. With the exception of the Shah's birthday, the holiday is the biggest day of the year in Iran. Falling on the first day of spring, it is celebrated there by everybody knocking off to spend the day in the country.

Among those who attended the embassy fete in Washington were the Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani, the Ambassador of Denmark and Mme. de Kauffmann, the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Erkin, the Ambassador of Australia and Mrs. Makin, the Ambassador of Ceylon and Mme. Corea, the Ambassador of Burma and Mme. So Nyun, the Ambassador of Saudi-Arabia, Asad Al-Faqih and the Ambassador of Afghanistan and Princess Zohra Naim.

Diplomats Attend

Others were the Minister of Syria and Mme. El-Khouri, the Minister of Lebanon and Mme. Malik, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, Justice and Mrs. Wiley B. Rutledge, the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. James Edwin Webb, Justice and Mrs. Harold H. Burton, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Mrs. Elonzo Tyner, Rear Admiral and Mrs. E. T. Wooldridge, Senator Theodore Francis Green, Mr. and Mrs. Leland Morris, former Minister to Iran and Mrs. Louis G. Dreyfus and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Muir.

Dancing lasted till the small hours, when the Ambassador bade his guest farewell. Another spring in Washington is here, and in Iran a new year.

Party to Honor Two Generals

Lieut. Gen. T. B. Larkin, recently named director of the Army's Logistics Division, and Maj. Gen. Where to Find Chinaware

Many years ago, I bought a set of dishes that was supposed to be open stock. However, the store I bought it from has discontinued handling it and I have been unable to locate it. Now I would like the address of the firm making these dishes or to know if they are being handled here in the city. Here is what is stamped on the back of the plates: "Pope-Gosser China-Made in U. S. A.—Sterling 42—Princess Pattern." I. B.

The address of the Pope-Gosser China Co. is given by Thomas' "Register of American Manufacturers" as Coshocton, Ohio. I suggest that you write them there to find out whether they still make this pattern and where you can buy it.

To the reader who asked about screens: If you paint the outside of ordinary screening with aluminum paint (not filling up the holes), you can see perfectly from the inside out but can scarcely see in at all. A. C.

How do you remove light-colored paint from a blue cotton dress after several months? A. E.

Rub the paint stain vigorously between the fingers to break the surface of the paint and crumble as much of it off as possible. Now, rub colorless petroleum jelly or shortening into it well and give it 30 minutes or so to act on the paint to soften it. When softened, sponge on both sides of the fabric with a solvent such as turpentine or carbon tetrachloride. It may take several applications of fat followed by solvent to remove it completely.

How do you remove bicycle grease from nylon stockings?

Rub colorless petroleum jelly or shortening into the stain and let stand for 3 minutes to soften. Rubbing the fat into the stain gently between the fingers will hasten the softening. When thoroughly softened sponge with carbon tetrachloride. Place an absorbent pad under the stain and sponge lightly with the carbon tetrachloride on a soft cloth.

During the summer months, I stored a beige wool sweater and, to prevent moths, used crystals and dry camphor. Upon taking the sweater out of storage, it was found that rust-colored spots appeared in various places. The dry cleaners have been unable to remove these spots. Do you know of any method whereby these spots can be removed? J. P. H.

Since the dry cleaners were not successful in removing the spots, I know of no home method which would be successful. My only suggestion to make the sweater usable, would be to dye it a color dark enough to cover the spots.

My parents are sailing to Holland in April and would appreciate your suggestions as to what type clothes would be best for traveling; that is, if jersey would be suitable for dresses and what other suit materials and dress materials would be comparatively wrinkle proof or noncrushable for touring Europe at that time of year. L. W. D.

Your parents will find about the same weather in most of Europe in April as we have here. Suits with top coats for cooler days and evenings would be appropriate. Woolens with a hard finish such as garbadines and sharkskin do not wrinkle as readily as the softer fabrics. For general wear, colorful rayon knit blouses would be most practical because they do not wrinkle in packing and can be washed and worn without ironing. Nylon blouses would be wonderful for the same reasons and they dry so quickly.

Jersey would be most appropriate for dresses, also, and some of the more firmly woven printed rayons and silks would give good service. Printed fabrics would show the wrinkles less than the plain ones. Many wrinkles can be eliminated if, when packed, rolls of tissue paper are laid in the folds of the dresses to avoid sharp creases.

Portraits

By James J. Metcalfe

My All Is Yours

My love is yours in every way . . . That I could ever give it . . . And every day is yours to say . . . How you would have me live it . . . I only want to serve you, dear . . . And fill your heart with pleasure . . . And make each moment, month and year . . . A memory to treasure . . . Because each thought that you express . . . Is like a loving token . . . And you have said no promises . . . That you have ever broken . . . You are not critical of me . . . Impatient or demanding . . . But you bestow your sympathy . . . And you are understanding . . . And that is why I offer you . . . My every good endeavor . . . And why I promise to be true . . . Forever and forever.

Bill Breaks Sphinx-Like Silence on Pyramids

It has been the policy of this department to ignore such things as chain letters and pyramid clubs. They produce no new wealth, and therefore are rackets, because they deprive many people of exactly the same amount of money which showers down on the handful of early birds.

However, Nancy Gilbert has an alternative suggestion which seems much more sensible. She calls her plan "The Beeramid Club."

It works like this: Each member brings to the party one bottle of beer, and two guests.

Each of the guests is instructed to bring two bottles of beer, plus two other guests; and these guests-once-removed are told to bring four bottles of beer each.

As the guests double, the beer also doubles. Pretty soon everybody is seeing double, and you've got a real high class party going.

Theoretically, it could last forever. But some sourpuss is sure to break the chain, so eventually the beer will run out, and your guests will go home.

Then you clean up all the empty beer bottles, and take them back to the dealer—for a 2-cent refund on each. After entertaining a couple of hundred guests, it's easy to see how this would run into considerable money.

The only flaw in the plan is that it makes no provision for people who bring canned beer.

In this one you start the pyramid with $800 and after 12 days you get a dollar back.

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

MISCELLANY

Horace Heidt, who took over the "No. 1 Spot" on NBC when Jack Benny switched to CBS, will soon be replaced with a stronger show because of a sagging Hooper rating. His latest Hooper was less than 10; Benny's topped 23 . . . Because I couldn't read his handwriting and erroneously identified him as "H. J.," H. I. Bernard of 321 Massachusetts ave. ne. now signs himself "Aitch Eye" . . . Those neighborhood movie ads continue to amuse my constituents. The Circle Theater, says Maureen Marlowe of 610 Shoreham bldg., recently advertised: "The Snake Pit, Open 5 p. m." . . . Helen S. Stanton of 5168 Fulton st. nw, resolved that she was finally going to be forehanded enough to claim one of our Give-Away puppies before it was gone. So she got a bulldog edition of The Washington Post and started out the night before—only to have the car break down, then run out of gas, and then have the battery go dead. It was a hectic night—and still no puppy . . . Patricia Guion of 4201 N. 4th st., Arlington, Va., is still trying to untangle a column-long story in one of our afternoon contemporaries. It inadvertently combined a report on King George's operation with a flood story . . . Mrs. Jesse D. Myers of 3810 Gramercy st. nw. observes that the same paper ran a picture of a pretty young lady and captioned it "Mr. Altman"—a fine thing to do to the vivacious Sylvia Altman, who coordinates labor support for the Community Chest fund drives . . . Paul A. Muse of the Manassas Messenger, who usually reports typos from his own paper, also reads his contemporaries rather carefully. In one of them he finds: "They discussed the transportation problem and the widening of at least two full-time physical education directors" . . . Tell 'em to quit discussing these things, Paul, and kill two birds with one stone by providing some transportation for those physical education directors. Travel is broadening.

WE KNOW THE TYPE

The other day, in an "Overheard" item, I reported the wisecrack that "the only thing you can be sure of when you see a woman driver with her arm out is that her car window is rolled down."

G. L. Patterson of 1207 M st. nw., takes exception. He says: "How about the women who roll the window down about a half inch and stick their index fingers out to signal a turn?"

Why limit it to women, I wonder? We all know the type—they not only refuse to show more than the first knuckle, but don't even do that much until their turn is half-completed.

And nine times out of ten, it's from the wrong lane to boot.

NEW PARTY IN PYRAMID

Bill and Mary were the kind
Who really got around.
Invited almost everywhere
That parties could be found.

Then suddenly they disappeared
And people said: "How strange."
Until their cards announced today:
"Arrived! One bawl and change."

G. A. Fisher,

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Mrs. Arthur D. Hill, jr., of 3774 Gunston rd., Alexandria, Va., is intrigued by the Associated Press story of the non-paying guest who was discovered living in a summer hotel in Spring Valley, N. Y.

The story said he had flourished for weeks on a diet of liquor and canned goods, and had been "shaving with vegetable soup."

Mrs. Hill wonders whether this is better than using a razor.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Senate Debates Aid to Aggressor

By Drew Pearson

Under current debate in the Senate is a relatively obscure amendment to the Marshall Plan appropriation that happens to be of vital interest to every American who may have to shoulder arms.

Pearson

In brief, it boils down to the fact that the United States opposes aggression by words while feeding aggression with money.

Specifically the amendment states that an aggressor nation that blocks the peace efforts of the Security Council of the United Nations shall not continue to draw cash from the Marshall Plan. The State Department opposes this amendment.

Not many people—or Senators—are interested in this unobtrusive amendment—for it's aimed at a war halfway round the world, which many Americans have scarcely heard about and which very few care about—the Dutch East Indies.

Yet it's all-important. For when one country gets away with being an aggressor, the gates are down.

This newspaperman, looking back over the years of covering many peace conferences, many attempts to stop wars, recalls three scenes that U. S. Senators and U. S. diplomats might keep in mind as they vote on this current amendment.

Scene 1—The Pan American Union. Time—1928. Calvin Coolidge was in the White House; Frank B. Kellogg was Secretary of State; the world was relatively peaceful. Suddenly, in the jungles of South America, war broke out between Bolivia and Paraguay.

However, as in most wars, an economic factor was involved. The Dillon, Read banking firm of Secretary of Defense Forrestal had lent Bolivia 20 million dollars, which was used to buy arms. With such an arsenal to play with, no one could have kept the Bolivians from making war.

Kellogg's peace efforts though eventually ending in failure, set an inspiring example to the rest of the world. The world's peace machinery was still reasonably intact.

Scene 2—Mukden. Time, September 18, 1931, and the months following. Henry L. Stimson, another Republican, was Secretary of State. This time, a more powerful nation, Japan, decided to become the aggressor. Stimson saw in this two things: (1) A complete breakdown of world's peace machine; (2) the beginning of Japan's conquest of all China.

Mobilizing the weight of the League of Nations, the Nine-Power Pact, and the Kellogg Pact, Stimson spent months trying to plug this hole in the dike of peace.

But the British, the French, and even American economic interests undercut him. Later, and right up to Pearl Harbor, American oil companies and scrap-iron dealers dumped shipload after shipload of vital warmaking materials into Japan.

Scene 3—Ethiopia. The Time—1935. By now Franklin Roosevelt was President. By now, also, failure to bring peace in Manchuria had weakened the League of Nations. However, when Mussolini crashed his Fascist legions, without warning, into defenseless Ethiopia, the League made its greatest effort.

It applied economic sanctions. It cut off all trade with Italy—except the one product that would have paralyzed Italy—oil.

After that it was only a matter of time before full-scale European war was inevitable.

Scene 4—Washington. Time—The Present. Once again the oil lobbyists are busy. Once again they have the ear of the State Department. The Dutch East Indies are rich in oil, and Standard Vacuum's president, "Shorty" Elliott, has been busy backstage in Washington.

But when it comes to using the only language the Dutch understand—cutting off Marshall Plan aid—the State Department looks the other way. It has been clearly shown that the Marshall Plan money we send the Dutch is passed on to the Dutch army to fight a war in violation of the United Nations.

Yet when Senators want to cut off this aid, the State Department has whispered, unofficially but effectively, "No." A different State Department from the days of Henry L. Stimson and Frank B. Kellogg is in control today.

Hoey Denies Pearson Story

By The Associated Press

Senator Hoey (D., N.C.) told the Senate yesterday that Drew Pearson was in error in reporting Hoey a luncheon guest of Mrs. Ernest Howard, wife of an employe of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and sister of former Congressman Frank Hancock of North Carolina.

Pearson wrote in his column that a committee of which Hoey is a member is investigating alleged political favoritism in the RFC and that Hoey recently was Mrs. Howard's luncheon guest.

Hoey said he was not a guest of any Mrs. Ernest Howard but of a citizens association of which a Mrs. Ernest Howard is president. He said this Mrs. Howard is "not related by blood or marriage to the RFC Ernest Howard nor to Frank Hancock."

Hoey said he appointed a subcommittee to investigate the manner in which the Strickland Furniture Co. of High Point, N. C., obtained an RFC loan. He told the Senate he did this "purely because this whole thing originated in North Carolina and concerned North Carolinians."

"I wanted to be above any suggestion that I was trying to cover up in any way," he added.

Hoey said Hancock represented the Strickland firm in the loan negotiations.

The subcommittee, he said, has not made any report.
